Police Power In Review

Say Measure Conflicts With Constitution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The power of police to stop a suspicious-looking person on the street and "frisk" him for weapons or other criminal evidence may be headed for review by the Supreme Court.

Already accused in some quarters of coddling criminals and handcuffing the police, the court is being asked to examine the stop and frisk power in light of the constitutional prohibition against unreasonable searches and seizures.

In the view of civil libertarians and some bar groups the frisk procedure conflicts with the Constitution. The New York Civil Liberties Union, for instance, calls New York State's stop and frisk law an extreme inroad on the Fourth Amendment right.

To prosecutors and some judges, however, such laws are necessary, particularly to make sure that when a policeman questions someone on the street the answer won't be a bullet.

In January the court opened the door to another side of the problem when it granted a hearing to a Massachusetts man who claimed he was beaten into a submission by New Orleans police.

Stephen R. Wainwright of Brockton had refused to remove his jacket when police stopped him on Bourbon Street and said they were looking for a murder suspect who had a tattoo on his left forearm.

Wainwright asserted he was

Asylum Given To Daughter Of Stalin

GENEVA (AP) — Neutral Switzerland granted temporary haven Saturday to Svetlana Stalina, the daughter of Joseph V. Stalin, and officials said she has given up "for the time being" efforts to seek asylum in the United States.

She flew here as the lone passenger on an Italian airliner and was whisked off to an undisclosed destination. Informants said she was spirited away under heavy police guard to a hideaway in the Alps between Geneva and Bern, the Swiss capital.

A government announcement said Miss Stalina, 42, had expressed a wish not to return to the Soviet Union, where her father ruled as undisputed master from 1929 to his death in 1953.

A spokesman for the Soviet Embassy in Bern said of her arrival, "all we know is what we read in the newspapers."

But another Soviet source said:

"We have absolutely no reason to object to the Swiss government allowing her to come here. Of course this would be very different if there were an attempt to turn her arrival into an anti-Soviet propaganda feast."

U.S. officials have not acknowledged receiving any request for asylum from Miss Stalina, despite reports she had stayed at the residence of U.S. Ambassador Frederick Reinhardt in Rome and was in contact with the U.S. Embassy in New Delhi. She had left the Soviet Union ostensibly to bring the ashes of her husband or friend, Indian Communist Brijesh Singh to his Indian homeland.

"We don't know a thing," said a U.S. spokesman in Geneva. "We have nothing to say at all."

This was an echo of U.S. spokesmen in Rome and Geneva.

In Washington, State Department press officer Robert J. McCloskey told reporters: "It is not for the U.S. government to comment on this case under present circumstances." McCloskey said other governments, which he did not name, "are concerned and in any event we would not wish to complicate further the personal problems which Madame Svetlana Alliluyeva may face."

Alliluyeva was the maiden name of Miss Stalina's mother.

The Swiss granted her a visa for 45 days. Swiss officials said this might be extended indefinitely later.

May Face $13-Billion Deficit

Surcharge Tax Bid May Die Before Reaching Congress

WASHINGTON (AP) — Is the administration's proposal for a 6 per cent surtax dead even before it formally reaches Congress? If it is, President Johnson faces a whopping deficit of nearly $1 billion.

That question got emphatic and opposite answers Saturday in the wake of Johnson's Thursday request to Congress to restore the incentives to business investment suspended five months ago.

Johnson said at the same time he is not dropping his tax surcharge request.

But some key members of Congress virtually rule out the surtax as a political impossibility after the President urged reinstatement of the 7 per cent investment tax credit on equipment and machinery and accelerated depreciation on buildings.

But administration economists are just as emphatic in the other direction.

"Heavens, no," was the response of one when asked if reinstatement of the credit killed plans for the surtax.

Another said the surtax will now be needed even more than before because reinstatement of the business incentives will stimulate somewhat an economy already pegged for expansion later in the year.

But the question on some congressional minds is how can the administration ask for tax benefits now for business and then expect the same Congress to raise taxes later on both individuals and business.

Quick action has been promised by Congress on the reinstatement of the business incentives with the House Ways and Means Committee already planning a hearing for Tuesday and a House vote expected later in the week.

Action won't be as quick on the surtax which the administration has not yet sent to Congress in bill form. The committee doesn't plan a hearing until June, a schedule which virtually rules out the July 1 effective date asked by the administration.

One well-placed administration source said even if the surtax takes effect July 1 price pressures could be expected to ap-

Shorter Work Week, Bonus Are Proposed

DETROIT (AP) — White collar members of the United Auto Workers Saturday not only gave unanimous approval to a guaranteed annual income as a 1967 union goal but proposed a shorter work week and a bonus from any company's "excess profits."

A series of other fringe benefits also were suggested by some 250 delegates representing 50,000 UAW members who are technical, office and professional employes within and without the auto industry.

A 35-hour week without a reduction in current pay will be recommended for adoption to the 1.4 million-member union's general prebargaining convention meeting in Detroit April 20-22.

The office workers also proposed that "where it can be established that a firm's profit is in excess of its normal anticipated profit a bonus be paid to all employes based on this excess profit."

They did not go into specifics or amount.

Among other things, representatives of technical, office, professional unionists also recommended goals which would give:

—A bonus of at least 50 per cent on top of regular pay when one is on vacation.

—The gearing of pensions to the cost of living, as auto wages now are, and the right of a worker to carry pension credits from one employer to another if he changes jobs.

UAW President Walter P. Reuther told the group Friday the union intends to win, by strike if necessary, a guaranteed annual income in new contract negotiations opening in July with the automotive Big Three — General Motors, Ford and Chrysler.

Later he told some 170 delegates representing 150,000 UAW members employed in the agricultural implement and industrial equipment industries the same thing. Within minutes the latter group gave its approval.

The UAW's Skilled Trades Department, with some 200,000 members, is expected to follow suit this week at an Atlantic City meeting.

The technical, office and professional group proposed that the nine holidays now observed be raised to 11, with a provison that an additional holiday be given in any month in which one of the 11 did not fall.

Four Boys, Four Girls

Octuplets Born In Mexico Die

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The 20th century's third recorded set of octuplets is dead.

The eighth, a boy, died at 8:30 a.m., 13 hours and 50 minutes after delivery began Friday in a clinic in a poor section of Mexico City.

The mother, Maria Teresa Lopez de Sepulveda, 21, was reported in good condition but exhausted. She was despondent over the deaths of the four boys and girls. Doctors described the infants as having been well-developed physically although they were two months premature.

One of the only two other recorded births of octuplets occurred in Mexico in 1921. The other was recorded in China in 1934.

The Sepulveda octuplets were 12 inches long with arms and legs the length of an adult's little finger. They weighed from 18½ ounces to 22 ounces — an average of 19¼ ounces.

Four died within five hours of birth. A team of six pediatricians at 20th November Hospital worked throughout the night in a vain effort to save the others.

The father, Genaro Sepulvada Boone, 24, a $280-a-month assistant bookkeeper, was given sedation after the all-night vigil. His wife was resting in her hospital room.

Dr. Pablo Rodriguez Medina, pediatrician in charge at the hospital for government employes, announced he will ask permission for an autopsy on the babies to determine any effects from the contraceptive pills Mrs. Sepulveda had taken until eight months ago.

Dr. Rodriguez Medina estimated that since contraceptive pills were first introduced into Mexico multiple births have increased 200 per cent.

Quintuplets — one stillborn — were born to a farm worker's wife in a Mexican village last month. Sets of triplets also have been reported recently.

Sepulveda told reporters his wife had been taking the pills for a year after their first child, now more than 2 years old, caused some physical damage at birth. When she recuperated she stopped taking the pills, Sepulveda said. He said she never took fertility pills.

Sepulveda, whose mother said the family is descended from American frontiersman Daniel Boone, works for the government social security organization which operates the hospital and will pay the medical expenses.

X-rays had forecast a multiple birth but the number surprised Dr. Enrique Estrada Sahagun, the family doctor who delivered the first four. An assistant took over for the remaining babies at the clinic. All were placed in the same incubator and transferred to the 20th of November Hospital.

The babies were delivered within an hour and the mother had no anesthetic, said Dr. Estrada.

Although the infants were perfectly formed, physicians said it was unlikely any survivors could have led healthy lives because of probably nervous system deficiencies.

The deaths were attributed to respiratory and hydration problems.

US Pilots Again Hammer At North Vietnam Steel Plant

Flurry Of Fighting Along With Offensive

SAIGON (AP) — U. S. pilots hammered at North Vietnam's Thai Nguyen steel plant Saturday in the second raid on that strategic objective within 24 hours. A sharp flurry of fighting in South Vietnam accompanied the rising air offensive.

A broadcast dispatch from Hanoi, listing action over a half-dozen provinces, declared seven planes were shot down and some fliers — the number unspecified — were captured. There was no confirmation in Saigon.

U. S. Air Force Thunderchiefs — about 42 planes — staged the followup strike on the mill, which covers 2.5 square miles of the countryside 38 miles north of Hanoi.

Pilots again reported "all bombs on target." There was no official assessment of the damage, but Capt. Charles C. Murphy, 26, Abilene, Tex., said he had seen two large white secondary explosions through smoke that wreathed the area.

Like the first raid Friday on this keystone of North Vietnam's heavy industry, the attack was mounted from Thailand.

Communist MIGs again were sighted in the area, but apparently kept their distance. There was no report of dogfighting.

A Thunderchief shot down one of the enemy fighters Friday. Pilots said another was probably destroyed and a third was damaged. The bases of these Soviet-designed jets remain immune from attack by orders from Washington.

Ho Chi Minh's regime denounced the bombing of its steel plant as escalation. The Soviet news agency Tass echoed the charge.

In Washington, the Defense Department reaffirmed that the bombing marked no stepup, but only "a continuation of our attacks on the North Vietnamese ability to infiltrate men and equipment into South Vietnam."

A spokesman described the plant, which turns out such things as cargo barges, bridge sections and petroleum drums, as a legitimate military target.

Heaviest of the American ground engagements Saturday was a fight between helicopter-borne units of the 3rd Brigade, U.S. 9th Infantry Division, and a battalion of about 500 Viet Cong along the Oriental River 14 miles southwest of Saigon.

Some shells fired by American artillery in support of the infrantrymen fell short, killing four soldiers and an American free-lance photographer, Ronald D. Gallagher, 27, Coffeyville, Kan. Gallagher was the ninth correspondent to die in the war.

Three U.S. Army helicopters were hit by enemy fire, but managed to fly to safety.

One Precinct In Township Plan Okayed

Plan Probably Will Not Be Put Into Effect Until 1968

A motion to establish one voting precinct in each of Pettis County's 17 townships was passed by acclamation Friday at a meeting of the county court and five members of the Farm Bureau. The meeting was held at the courthouse here.

The motion for the plan was made by William Corlew and seconded by Thomas Harvey.

Although the new plan probably won't go into effect until 1968, the townships immediately affected were Longwood, Blackwater, Hughesville, LaMonte, Prairie, Sedalia, Smithton, Green Ridge and Washington. In each of these townships there are two or more voting precincts.

Recent tabulations of votes cast indicated that fewer votes were being cast in each precinct. A tentative decision was then made by the county court to study redistricting. The plan adopted Friday would, in effect, save the county about $2,500 per election.

It was pointed out that modern rtansportation makes travel to a more centrally-located precinct feasible and desirable to voters.

If a special election issue arises prior to 1968, the county court judges would have to determine where the voting sites would be. However, tentative locations named Friday were R-I School in Blackwater Township; Cartright School in Heath Creek; Cumberland Church in Prairie; Smithton for Smithton Township; Anderson School for Flat Creek; Manila School for Washington; Green Ridge for Green Ridge Township; LaMonte city hall for LaMonte; highway building for Longwood; Striped College School for Sedalia Township; Hughesville for Hughes-

Man Can Return Home

Red Sentence Is Reduced To Fine

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet appeals court accepted Saturday a contrite young American's plea for leniency, reducing his three-year labor camp sentence to a $5,555 fine.

With a faint smile breaking through his nervous solemnity, Buel Ray Wortham Jr., heard the court give the decision that meant he could go home to North Little Rock, Ark. Its citizens had petitioned the court to free Wortham and promised to pay his fine.

Wortham said he hoped to be home by next weekend, ending what began as a brief tourist visit to the Soviet Union but turned into a six-month stay costing more than $10,000 in the fine, the loss of his car, his legal fees and other expenses.

Wortham was convicted Dec. 21 of illegally changing money three times and stealing an antique statue of a bear from a Leningrad hotel.

"I abused the hospitality of the Soviet people," Wortham told the Supreme Court of the Russian Federation at Saturday's appeal hearing. "As a result of this, I spent over three months in a Soviet prison," more than 2½ months of it in isolation, the 25-year-old former U.S. Army officer said. He was released on bail Jan. 14.

"I am very sorry for all the trouble I caused. If the Soviet Supreme Court could lower my sentence and set me free, I can assure the court that I will never again abuse the hospitality of another country," Wortham told the court.

Prosecutor Ivan F. Novokshonov noting Wortham's youth, the relative seriousness of his crimes and his confession and repentance, said he thought it possible to apply a Soviet law that permits a lesser sentence.

The prosecutor recommended to the three judges that they substitute the fine for the labor camp sentence. He rejected defence attorney Fyodor Rozhdevensky's request that Wortham's car and other property be returned to him.

After deliberating for 105 minutes, the two men and a woman on the bench filed back into a plain little courtroom two blocks from Red Square. It was decorated with photographs of Communist party leader Leonid I. Brezhnev and Premier Alexei N. Kosygin.

Faina Mamazora read the decision for her male colleagues on the bench. It followed the prosecutor's recommendations exactly.

Republican Candidates Are Ratified

First Ward, Orville Gott, 1600 West Fourth; Second Ward, B. J. Mecum, 1930 East Seventh; Third Ward, Carl H. Landes, 1105 Ware; Fourth Ward, George H. Miller, 3003 Southwest Blvd.

The general city election will be held Tuesday, April 4.

Presiding at the city convention was Leroy Iuchs, Republican city chairman. A 15 minute recess was taken to allow ward delegates to caucus.

Candidate Gott was nominated by James Schmidt. David Eisenstein acting chairman of the delegation in the absence of James Keck, spoke on behalf of Gott, emphasizing his activity in the Jaycee organization.

Porter Duffett nominated the Second Ward candidate, B. J. Mecum, and presented him to the convention as active in youth work, president of his church board, and a proven leader.

Carl H. Landes, Third Ward candidate, was nominated by Gordon Wolf, who spoke in his behalf and mentioned that although Landes was a newcomer to Sedalia politics, he was an able leader.

Don Callis, Jr., the Fourth Ward delegation spokesman, yielded the floor to George Dugan, Jr., who spoke in behalf of George Miller's candidacy. He pointed out that Miller was not seeking reelection in the same way as the Democratic incumbents were because Miller had been elected to fill the nine-month unexpired term of former Councilman Ralph Walker, now mayor. He is now endorsed by his group for a full two-year term.

Mayor Walker climaxed the convention with a brief talk. He empahsized that as mayor he was doing everything in his power to get petty politics out of City Hall. He had bent over backwards in every way to avoid conflict of a political nature so that the city image could receive favorable attention

Candidates Ratified At Democrat Meeting

The Democratic City Convention was held Saturday night in the Circuit Court room of the courthouse at which time the Council candidates from the four wards were ratified by the delegates. Davey Jones, city chairman, presided over the meeting.

The Democratic candidates are James Schumaker, First Ward; R. N. "Doc" Snavely, Second Ward; Raymond "Ray" Simon, Third Ward; and Lloyd C. "Chinie" Kennon, Fourth Ward.

Schumaker, Snavely and Simon are seeking re-election to the Council from their ward. The term is for two years.

The candidates were nominated at ward caucus meetings held Thursday night.

Ann Landers
Answers Your Problems

Dear Ann Landers: Before our younger daughter married I had a strong suspicion that her fiance was a homosexual. He had none of the effeminate mannerisms that people generally identify with this condition but his friends were all notorious homos. I told my daughter of my fears and asked her why a person would run with a crowd like that unless he was one of them. Finally she said, "I have first-hand knowledge that he is normal." Her answer was both a blow and a relief.

Last week (after six months of marriage) my daughter tearfully confided that her husband has almost no physical interest in her and that he is out five nights a week with his strange friends.

What does this sound like to you? What is the solution? If he is a homosexual can he be cured?—SHATTERED MOTHER.

Dear Mother: It sounds as if your daughter's husband is bisexual and that he prefers his male friends to his wife.

The chances for "curing" a homosexual are slim, even when the sick one wants desperately to live a normal life. If he prefers to be with members of his own sex, the chances for a cure are zero. Your daughter should have a frank talk with her husband and discuss the possibility of an annulment.

Dear Ann Landers: I dated a widower for over a year and grew very fond of him. There was every indication that the feeling was mutual.

Three months ago he was transferred to a city 250 miles from here. He drove back every other weekend and on alternate weekends I took the bus to see him. We spoke intermittently on the telephone.

Yesterday he telephoned to say he is getting married. At first I thought he was kidding but it soon became clear that he was serious. He swears that he is not in love with the woman but he says he can tolerate her. She has a lovely home and is well fixed. I asked how he could marry a woman he didn't love and he replied, "If things don't work out we'll go our separate ways and I won't be hurt."

I am trying hard to keep from falling to pieces over the shock. What do you make of this?—STUNNED.

Dear Stunned: Men who get married suddenly always have a grand assortment of "excuses" for friends, former sweethearts, and even themselves.

The man is marrying the woman because he thinks he sees some social and financial advantages. He probably does not love her, but then he didn't love YOU either, so cheer up. You came off better than she did.

Dear Ann Landers: My "problem" is unimportant compared with the problems most people write to you about but it has caused so much trouble in our family you wouldn't believe it. Six people are not speaking to each other on account of this.

When a person returns to a town where he used to live, should he telephone his relatives and say "hello" or should he assume that his relatives will know he is in town and call him if they want to see him?—FUR FLYING.

Dear Fur. The person who goes to another city to visit should write in advance to friends and relatives he wishes to see or he should telephone them when he arrives. The visitor who expects people to learn he is in town and call him is rather arrogant.

Unsure of yourself on dates? What's right? What's Wrong? Should you? Shouldn't you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35c in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper, enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Moscow Expresses Suspicion

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
AP Special Correspondent

Moscow openly expresses suspicion that Mao Tse-tung's group in Red China is doing all in its power to prevent North Vietnam from agreeing to any sort of negotiations and is hoping to promote war between the Soviet Union and the United States.

There may be substance in the Soviet complaint.

China is engulfed in political and economic turmoil. Should she recover her balance in the near future, hopes for negotiations between the United States and North Vietnam could be set back indefinitely.

Peking itself indicates fear that North Vietnam may be weakening in its resolve to reject peace talk overtures. From inside North Vietnam there are faint hints of internal political difficulties.

A month ago Chinese Foreign Minister Chen Yi said the Vietnam war "is now entering a crucial stage." Quoting Mao, he urged North Vietnam not to be "intimidated" by the enemy. He added that "the heroic Vietnamese people . . . have long made up their minds not to flinch from heavy sacrifices but are determined to accomplish the great cause of liberation."

Translated, that might mean urgent advice to Hanoi to fight on indefinitely. That is how the Russians seem to translate it. They hammer on the theme that Mao's group wants the war to continue indefinitely in hope that eventually it will cause a major U.S.-Soviet clash.

Soviet Communist party chief Leonid Brezhnev, Premier Alexei N. Kosygin and President Nikolai Podgorny all accuse Peking of helping "the U.S. imperialists" in Vietnam. Peking returns the compliment, accusing Moscow of precisely the same thing.

The Chinese leaders, Podgorny said this week, "do not preclude a worldwide military conflict" in pursuit of their ambitions.

This could reflect a Soviet belief that the danger of a U.S.-Soviet clash over Vietnam indeed does exist. It might be defused by persuading North Vietnam to take a breathing spell, to talk for a while and wait a future and better opportunity of enveloping the South.

The North's propaganda has suggested that its problems are growing with the increased U.S. bombing and shelling.

North Vietnam has been at war many years. Its people probably are tired. It could use a breathing spell. Possibly, Hanoi might even listen with some interest to proposals for talks, if it were not for the pressure of its huge neighbor, Red China.

Worst Fire On Kansas Prairies

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Strong winds are driving flames through dead vegetation across wide reaches of drought-ridden Kansas in some of the worst prairie fires in many years.

The endless miles of rolling bluestem grassland in the Flint Hills make an easy target of the firebug, or a carelessly-tsosed match.

Weary firefighters from eight towns were mopping up early today along the borders of a blaze that started Friday afternoon about five miles north of Florence and raced 15 miles to the northeast along a front from one to six miles wide.

"That fire," said Sheriff Francis Towle of Cottonwood Falls, "was six miles wide when it came over the hills and hit Middle Creek. That stopped it, except along the northeast edge where it ran along the south side of the creek until a blacktop road stopped it just a half-mile from Elmdale."

The sheriff had no definite information on livestock that may have been in the fire's path, except that "August Ollick said h ehad 20 head of cattle that didn't have a hair left on them."

Across the line in Marion County the fire destroyed all the outbuildings of a vacant farmlot.

"I was over in Lyon County helping fight one there when I heard about this one coming into my own county of Chase," Towle said.

"These are very damaging fires. The grounf is so dry the fire burns the grass roots several inches into the ground, and fence posts are completely burned off. There's not a bit of moisture in them."

Firefighting equipment was sent from Peabody, Marion, Florence, Cottonwood Falls, Strong City, El Dorado, Herington and Council Grove.

A Salvation Army canteen from El Dorado helped sustain the firefighters during the long battle.

Other fires caused heavy damage north of Topeka, north o fFort Scott, northwest of Liberal, east of Wichita, and on the Kansas Army Ammunition Plant reservation east of Parsons.

One of the worst was in Jefferson County about 10 miles north of Topeka where a blaze covered a square mile and wiped out the house, barn and outbuildings on the Ross C. Campbell farm. Only a silo and a chimney were left standing.

Campbell also lost 20 sows and several cows. A pickup truck owned by a neighbor, Rollin Clark, was destroyed. Firemen from Meriden, Oskaloosa, Rock Creek, Valley Falls and Topeka fought the blaze.

Wind-driven tumbleweeds helped spread flames across 2,000 acres of grassland northwest of Liberal. Neighbors helped Archie Scott save his farm buildings by wetting them down.

A blaze 10 miles north of Fort Scott burned over 160 acres and caused two traffic accidents involving five cars. Two persons were injured in the crashes which occurred in dense smoke rolling across U. S. 69.

Ray Davis, Sedgwick County fire chief, described the blaze on the east edge of Wichita as "one of the biggest in the county in years."

Heavy damage was caused at the Beech Aircraft Corp. recreation area. The Wichita Art Association galleries, the Minneha elementary chool and a county fire station were endangered for a while.

Franklin Pierce was president of the United States when the Republican party was organized on Feb. 28, 1854.

Upset After Students Are Released

ATHENS, Ohio (AP) — "It seemed like everyone was trying to be the first one to leave," said one Ohio University student.

He spoke of the pandemonium that developed after the 15,000-student body was released Friday two weeks early for spring vacation because of a strike by nonteaching university personnel.

A check - cashing run caused the campus branch of the Athens National Bank to close its doors. Huge traffic jams developed on virtually every street and highway in this southeast Ohio area. There was a hopeless situation at the bus station. Telephone lines were jammed.

The strike continued with no hint of settlement.

Some 600 members of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employes kept up their battle for payroll deduction of union dues by the university. This issue caused the walkout.

The union represents cooks, janitors and similar nonteaching employes.

Mao Orders Military Aid For Support

TOKYO (AP) —Chinese Communist party chairman Mao Tse-tung has ordered the military to take over his faltering campaign to regain power from President Liu Shao-chi, it was reported today.

Speaking indirectly — through his theoretical journal, Red Flag — Mao told the army to take part "from top to bottom" in the three-way alliances now being formed to seize power.

Red Flag, distributed by the New China News Agency, made it plain that Mao expects the military to play leading roles in these organizations which he hopes will wrest control of every aspect of Chinese administration.

The 2.5 million - man army actively plunged into Mao's nationwide purge — the great proletarian cultural revolution — early in January. Resisted in many areas, it has not been uniformly loyal. Revolts have been reported in Sinkiang, Inner Mongolia, Szechuan Province and Tibet.

In the places so far claimed for Mao, the army has swiftly taken over leadership, then acted as policeman for the initially shaky Maoist committees challenging the Liu administration.

Given its greater discipline, o ganizing ability and cohesiveness, the army appears certain to dominate the other two groups in the "three-way alliances" being formed—the Maoist mass organizations and cadres.

From southeastern Kwangtung Province, Western contact sources inside China reported that more than 200,000 army troops had been moved into the province to prevent a coup against pro-Maoists in control of government bureaus.

Chinese travelers reaching Hong Kong from Canton said the troop build-up in Kwangtung had produced a "new high" in tension and worry of future bloodshed. Earlier reports from the area said there had been some 170 casualties in clashes between pro-Maoists and opposing county officials at Fatshan, near Canton, a week ago.

Radio broadcasts from Kwangsi Province, on the southern border between Yunnan and Kwangtung, indicate continued trouble there in trying to get peasants to prepare seedbeds on communal and state farms. The broadcasts said that officials, troops, and public security units must supervise peasants in their farm work.

Land Is Burned Over

PARSONS, KAN. (AP) — A prairie fire swept several hundred acres of land in the Kansas Army Ammunition Plant area east of Parsons Friday before being brought under control.

There was no property damage, Capt. Wayne F. Batson, the plant commanding officer, said.

The Parsons fire department assisted plant firemen in fighting the blaze which was fanned by a high south wind.

New Rockets In Vietnam Red Arsenal

SAIGON (AP) — The Communists have added two powerful artillery rockets to their arsenal in South Vietnam, the U.S. Command reported today.

The new rockets, one thought to be of Soviet manufacture and the other tentatively identified as Chinese in origin, added fresh evidence that the Communists are preparing for more intensive attacks on allied base camps in an attempt to weaken the advantage in artillery, helicopters and bombers enjoyed by the allied side.

An announcement said fragments from rockets fired into American artillery positions near Quang Tri City March 7 were tentatively identified as a five-inch, fin-stabilized Soviet rocket with an estimated range of 6.2 miles.

It said the rocket was of a different design than the 140mm rockets poured into Da Nang airbase Feb. 27. These rockets had no fins and were first used in Vietnam during the Da Nang attack.

The second rocket type was tenatatively identified by intelligence as being a 4.5-inch, spin-stabilized Chinese rocket with a somewhat shorter range than the Soviet model.

Until now American and other allied bases were considered threatened mostly by 81mm mortar attacks and by suicide squads who tried to breach base perimeter defenses.

The greater range of the Soviet and Chinese rockets certainly will mean pinning more U.S. field troops down to defense jobs, somewhat weakening the size of units available for offensives.

The second purpose appeared to be an attempt to knock out the air and artillery that have so severely hammered the Communists in their heretofore "safe sanctuaries."

Mint Will Close For Official Audit

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—The San Francisco Mint, a coin factory from which employes allegedly have been taking work home, will close today for an official audit and installation of new security devices.

The shutdown follows the indictment of four employes on charges of taking coins from the mint.

Eve Adams, director of the mint, said that thefts, if any, could be determined by comparing the weight of metal used in minting with the weight of coins and scraps after completion.

This audit is usually done every June. Miss Adams confirmed that the special tally was ordered by Washington.

Building Is Burned

CALIFORNIA, Mo. (AP) — Fire destroyed a storage building of the Twin City Heating & Plumbing Co. in California Friday afternoon.

Part of the firm's supplies were saved. Brooks Walters, a fireman, estimated the loss at $10,000. Traffic was rerouted around the intersection of U.S. 50 and Missouri 87 during the fire.

FRANKFURT, Germany (AP) —A new collection of letters from Rudolf Hess shows that the former deputy of Adold Hitler has reproved his wife for seeking his release from Spandau prison for war criminals.

Hess is the only inmate of the prison run by four allied powers of World War II. Hess' wife had written a letter asking that his life sentence be lifted.

"My honor is worth more to me than freedom," Hess wrote his wife last October. "You know that I had nothing to do with your action but how will you prove this to the outside world?" The letter's contents were disclosed Friday.

WARSAW, Poland (AP)—Members of Poland's ruling Communist party are accused of juggling statistics in factories and yielding to local prejudices in farm villages.

"Party activists perform many acrobatics to make the plan fit. They count unfinished products as production and artifically increase the amount of goods in the process of production" Chairman Roman Nowak told a session of the party's Central Control Commission.

ADEN (AP) — Sir Richard Turnbull, British high commissioner in Aden, has warned Britons to expect an increase in terrorism next week during a visit by a United Nations mission.

The mission, composed of representatives of Venezuela, Mali and Afghanistan, is to recommend means of carrying out U.N.-supervised elections after the South Arabian Federation attains independence, scheduled for 1968.

The pro-Egyptian Front for the Liberation of Occupied South Yemen — a group that opposes the British-backed federation—has called for strikes, demonstrations and stepped up violence during the mission's visit.

VALLETTA, Malta (AP)—The Maltese Confederation of Trade Unions says it has been assured by the British Trade Uni Congress that action is being taken for a last-minute "lightning intervention" in the Anglo-Maltese deadlock over Britain's decision to withdraw its forces on the tiny island.

The British said Friday however, they could make no more concessions to Malta, which says the withdrawal would create large-scale unemployment among civilian employes at the British bases.

Drop Plan To Face Gandhi In Election

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said today former Finance Minister Morarji Desai has dropped his plans to oppose her re-election as head of the Indian government.

"He has pledged his full and unqualified support to me," she told a news conference at her residence.

Mrs. Gandhi said she would name Desai, 71, deputy prime minister — a title he had demanded as the price for withdrawing from the race for leader of the Congress parliamtary party.

Passengers Escape From Burning Gas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Twenty-five passengers on a Greyhound bus ran through burning gasoline to safety Friday night as a 15-foot wall of flame raced toward them.

Police said nobody was injured. Witnesses gave this account:

A tanker truck slowed in heavy traffic on the Santa Ana Freeway and was struck by another truck, wrecking the tanker and spilling 1,825 gallons of gasoline.

An unidentified motorist stopped and set out flares to warn oncoming vehicles. A flare ignited the gasoline. There was an explosion and flames rose as high as 20 feet along 200 yards of the freeway.

The driver of the Los Angeles-bound bus, Wilmer Turner, braked to a stop to avoid hitting the two crashed trucks.

"I saw gas spurting out of the tanker. I got out of the bus and walked to the rear and saw flames. I ran to the front and yelled, 'Hey, all you cats, get off.' I never saw a bus clear so quick," Turner said.

Most of the passengers were Marines on liberty from Camp Pendleton 60 miles to the south.

Before firemen extinguished the blaze, the bus had been burned out, the tanker had been damaged the the other truck's trailer destroyed.

Sarah Bernahardt, famous actress, made her last stage appearance on Nov. 30, 1922, at Turin, Italy.

Approximately one-half the deaths by fire in 1960 occurred in homes and 30 per cent of the casualties were childredn.

No Answer To Many Problems

DETROIT (AP) — A chief aide to Walter P. Reuther says the union doesn't have "all the answers to the many, many thorny problems" a guaranteed annual wage would create, but it will strike if necessary to bring such a pay plan into effect.

Irving Bluestone, Reuther's administrative assistant, says the union is putting many varied models of such a plan through computers and expects to come up with several alternatives for switching auto production workers from hourly wages.

Both Reuther and Bluestone expressed confidence the UAW will come up with all answers however, before negotiations open in early July with the Big Three — General Motors, Ford and Chrysler — where the current three-year pacts run out Sept. 5.

The UAW bid for the guaranteed income could set the pattern for labor-management strife which many financial experts predict for major industries in the months ahead.

Reuther himself acknowledged by implication that the auto makers may be sharply opposed to such a plan. "I'm going out on a limb," he said.

But Friday he told some 250 delegates representing 50,000 technical, office and professional workers who are represented by the UAW: "We're not going to sign an agreement this year until we get a guaranteed income for our membership" in the auto industry.

Bluestone told the group the plan would amount to a contract guaranteeing an employe a certain income for a specified term of employment — income the employe would draw even if laid off by his employer during the specified term.

"It amounts to guaranteed employment or income," he said.

He said the array of knotty problems such a plan posed included:

— Eligibility: Whether it should be limited to a man with five years seniority, or to all employes, including the newly hired?

— Job security: What benefits will a man receive if laid off before he becomes fully eligible for the pay plan?

— Overtime: Will the companies slow down on hiring and go on overtime rather than take on a new employe whose income they will be required to guarantee for a full year?

— Seniority: "A sticky problem or whether an older worker should have the option to stay on or leave and draw his pay while the man with less seniority continued to work?"

Bluestone said the companies are likely to think the plan very costly, but he said closing the gap "from where we are to where we want to go" would not be a great jump.

Paintings Recovered

BOSTON (AP) — A $250,000 collection of stolen paintings including at least one Renoir has been recovered by FBI agents and three Massachusetts men have been arrested.

The paintings were taken from the home of the late Hans Hofmann, a leading abstract-expressionist painter, in Provincetown. The theft was discovered Dec. 12.

Apples are said to have originated in the area between the Black and Caspian Seas.

Goldwater In Favor Of Counsul Treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barry Goldwater says he favors the proposed U. S.-Soviet consular treaty — but only if it requires the Soviet Union to stop supplying arms to North Vietnam.

Goldwater lined up Friday beind a proposed amendment that Senate backers of the pact say would rule out Soviet acceptance of the agreement.

In a statement issued here by Karl Hess, Goldwater's speechwriter during his 1964 presidential bid, the former Arizona senator allied himself with Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., who is seeking to attach the amendment.

Goldwater said opposing the Mundt proposal "would be the same as saying that Soviet support of the killing of our soldiers is of no consequence in the relations between America and the Soviet Union."

The Senate is scheduled to vote next Wednesday on the amendment.

TV Sets Added To Limousines

WASHINGTON (AP) — Foreign-made television sets have been added to the bulky array of gadgetry in the limousines of three of President Johnson's Cabinet members.

Spokesmen said Friday that Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara, Secretary of the Treasury Henry H. Fowler and John W. Gardner, secretary of health, education and welfare, now watch television on their travels to and from work — often reading newspapers at the same time.

All three television sets are manufactured by Sony, a Japanese firm.

Fowler is chairman of an interdepartmental Treasury committee studying ways to solve the U.S. balance of payments problem — caused by more dollars leaving the United States for imports than are spent by other nations for U.S. exports.

White House spokesmen said none of the President's cars have television.

Each Cabinet member can lease his own limousine and get the kind of car and equipment he wants.

Gadgets such as radio telephones, back seat reading lamps, radios and air conditioning generally have been standard equipment for years.

McNamara apparently started the trend toward car television two years ago. Fowler had a set installed in his limousine a year ago and Gardner followed suit a few weeks ago.

A Defense Department spokesman said the television set in McNamara's Lincoln Continental came as part of the regular equipment covered in a lease price of $1,500 a year when the secretary's present limousine was leased two years ago. The spokesman said he was informed the inclusion of the television set did not increase the cost.

The spokesman also said he had inquired of an automobile dealer as to the going rate for lease of such limousines and was told it is $600 a month.

At the Treasury, a spokesman said Fowler's Lincoln Continental limousine was leased last year under a three - year contract, also at a rental of $1,500 a year, and that the television was part of the regular equipment covered by the lease.

Gardner's television was bought separately, a spokesman said, at a cost of $275 installed when he leased a new Cadillac limousine a few weeks ago at a cost of $1,000 a year, equipped with air conditioning, radio telephone and other gadgets.

Automobile manufacturers for years reportedly have made special concessions to obtain government leases because of the prestige they feel is attached to having their cars chosen for such use.

WIN LOCAL PRODUCT—Boy Scout Troop 4, Jefferson City, Lake of the Ozarks Boy Scout Council, recently won a Parkhurst Manufacturing Co., trailer as a prize for outstanding activity in Scout Work. The trailer is made of aluminum with a fiberglass roof. It's a five-by-nine van-type vehicle which serves as a trophy to Troop 4. The troop had to have a full outdoor program of at least ten days and nights of camping, ten percent increase in membership, an average of one advancement in rank per member, participation by unit leaders in training programs and other projects to win. They can lose the trailer unless they perform equally well next year. Shown in the picture, from left to right, are Bob Parkhurst of the Sedalia firm, James Keefe, editor of The Missouri Conservationist and district chairman of Five Rivers District, Boy Scouts of America, and John Schmolzi, Jefferson City, Troop 4 scoutmaster.

Pay Boost Settlement Is Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some 137,000 railworkers — whose threatened strike would affect railroads with 95 per cent of the nation's rail mileage — have been urged to settle for a 5 per cent pay boost.

The recommendation came Friday from an emergency board directed by President Johnson to try to avert a strike by members of six AFL-CIO shopcraft unions.

The unions, pressing for a 6 per cent across-the-board wage hike, are threatening to strike April 12 unless their demands are met.

The board also urged parties to the dispute to sign a two-year contract retroactive to last Jan. 1. The board-backed contract would allow reopening of negotiations next Jan. 1 only on the question of a possible general wage increase.

The board said its proposal for a 5 per cent across-the-board boost would average 15 cents an hour.

Board Chairman David Ginsburg, a Washington attorney, said wage differences between skilled and unskilled railworkers also was at issue in the threatened strike. He said industry practice of granting flat wage hikes to all employes sharply had narrowed differences in pay between the two classes of workers.

The board called this unfair and urged the unions and railroads to conduct studies aimed at determining proper wage differentials.

The presidential panel asked the parties to accept binding arbitration of their dispute if they can't accept its recommendations.

To Provide Allies With Newest Rifles

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Defense Department, reacting to criticism of the sale of modern lightweight weapons to neutralist Singapore, says it will provide U. S. allies in Vietnam with nearly 30,000 M16 rifles.

A Pentagon source said Friday night that South Korean army and marine uits would get about 16,200 of the rapid-firing rifles while South Vietnamese airborne and marine maneuver elements would re-

The Pentagon's announcement came in the wake of a controversy that began earlier this week with disclosure of the sale of 20,300 similar, civilian model weapons to Singapore by the Colt Arms Manufacturing Co.

A Pentagon spokesman said then that U. S. troops in Vietnam were getting all of M16s they needed. But South Vietnamese and Korean officials s they wanted their troops armed with the rifles.

Anderson Files For Reelection

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Norman Anderson, Missouri attorney general, disclosed Friday night he has filed as a candidate for re-election in 1968.

Anerson told newsmen of his decision at a news conference before a $50-a-plate testimonial dinner for him at the Chase Park-Plaza Hotel in St. Louis.

The dinner was attended by Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, Sen. Edward V. Long, D-Mo., and Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii.

Inouye, the main speaker at the dinner, told the audience of 1,500 Democrats that the war in Vietnam could end within a year with each side "gradually ceasing their activities."

But, he warned, the United States should not unilaterally withdraw.

People In The News

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Maj. Harry J. Zellmer, aviation staff officer of the XVI Army Corps, received multiple honors at corps headquarters for heroic action in Vietnam.

Zellmer was presented Friday with the Legion of Merit, the Distinguished Flying Cross, the Bronze Star, and the second through eighth oak leaf clusters of the Air Medal.

Zellmer won the citations while serving as commanding officer of the 117th Assault Helicopter Company in Vietnam.

LONDON (AP)—Actress Vanessa Redgrave filed suit for divorce Friday against stage and film director Tony Richardson.

Lawyers said the case will be undefended.

Miss Redgrave, 30, married Richardson, 38, in 1962. They have two daughters. No date was set for a hearing.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) —The wife of singer-comedian Tom Smothers, one of the Smothers brothers, obtained an interlocutory divorce decree in Superior Court Friday.

The divorce was granted by default to Stephanie Smothers, 27. She charged extreme cruelty, testifying that Smothers, 30, had called her "stupid and a dummy" in public and said he didn't want to be married any more.

Mrs. Smothers was awarded alimony and child support and received custody of Tom IV, 22 months.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn. (AP) —Norman B. Mears, 62, will fly to Germany Easter Sunday to be married.

Which is nothing so unusual—except that he's taking 29 relatives and friends along with him. At current air line rates for first class fare, the tab could come to about $20,000.

Mears, of St. Paul, head of an engraving firm, will wed Hella Lux, a teacher at Belbert, Germany.

Information On Draft Unavailable

WASHINGTON (AP) — If you're wondering when the changes proposed by President Johnson are going to be made in the draft system, you're in distinguished company. Many of the officials running the operation don't know.

But informed sources do hazard a prediction on one change in the Selective Service System a lot of people have been wondering about.

It now appears that Johnson's announced plan to have 19-year-olds called first — reversing the callup order — probably will not be put into effect for at least several months.

Congress is about to consider proposed changes in the draft. And, sources said, the youngest-first plan is not expected to take effect before Congress acts.

Basic sections of the current draft law expire June 30.

The President could issue an executive order, effective immediately, that would make the change-over.

But sources said this would be extremely difficult. One troublesome question is what would be done about young men past the 19- to 20-year age group but liable for the draft up to age 26 — would they escape the draft?

what method would be used to

And there is the question of select the youngest eligibles to be called first.

In his draft message to Congress, Johnson recommended selection by an impartial random system — a limited lottery. But he has directed that the lottery be ready for operation only by Jan. 1, 1969.

The biggest uncertainty of all is Congress.

There have been expressions of sympathy on Capitol Hill for calling the youngest first. But even if Congress does specify such a change, it is expected the new system might not be made effective immediately and that probably it would be phased in.

The time element of two other announced presidential orders also remain in doubt. One would stop postgraduate deferments except for medical and dental students. The other would give no further deferments for enlistment in a reserve unit — except for filling specific vacancies.

As with the executive order on 19-year-olds, the President said only that he would issue the orders. He did not say when.

Free Plane Movie Days Are Numbered

WASHINGTON (AP) — The day of free airline movies on U. S. domestic flights soon may be over.

The Civil Aeronautics Board said Friday it plans a new rule requiring a charge of $2 a passenger for movies shown on planes.

The CAB reacted to a proposed agreement between 12 airlines to establish such a charge for visual in-flight entertainment in all classes of service.

The CAB said rate regulation rather than an airlines' agreement, might be preferable because the rule would apply to all airlines, not merely those signing the agreement.

Real opera is said to have had its birth in 1600, when "Euridice," composed by Peri and Giulio Caccini, was produced.

Washington Capsules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration may reverse its controversial guideline requiring a patient's written consent before being administered investigational drugs in the final stage of tests.

The FDA asked Friday for comment from interested parties within the next 30 days on its proposal to permit physicians administering the test drugs to use their own judgment whether to accept oral consent from the patients.

The original guideline, issued last August, required written consent "except in unusal circumstances." The revision would continue to require written consent when an investigational drug is being used primarily for the accumulation of scientific knowledge.

But when such drugs are used in the final clinical phase, it would be "the responsibility of investigators, taking into consideration the physical and mental state of the patient, to decide when it is necessary or preferrable to obtain consent in othes than written form," the FDA proposed.

The proposal also would require the investigator to give a patient "pertinent information" in all phases of clinical trials on the drug.

WASHINGTON (AP) — William T. Pecora, director of the U.S. Geological Survey, says using satellites to survey and monitor the earth's natural resources is necessary to continue president industrial civilization.

"If our ability to find and efficiently utilze resources does not accelerate, and accelerate rapidly, the industrial civilization we now enjoy will crumble within a few decades," he said.

Signature On Biggest Settlement

CHICAGO (AP) — James A. Doolan, 28, an Irish immigrant worker, used his shoulder to ink an "X" as his signature and received a $696,000 personal injury settlement. That sum is said to be the largest ever awarded to a living person by an American court.

Doolan, who can move only his head and one shoulder, was injured Aug. 20, 1964 while working as a construction laborer for the Case Foundation Co., of Kenneyville, Ill.

The injury occurred when a one-ton tripod platform slipped off a truck and slammed onto Doolan. It broke his neck and severely damaged his spinal cord.

Doolan now manipulates a specially designed wheel chair with his shoulder, a procedure he learned in the 20 months he was hospitalized.

Doolan's wife, Sheila, 23, was present at the signing of the settlement Friday. The couple had been married only seven weeks before the accident occurred.

The Doolans said they plan to return to their native County Cork, Ireland, as soon as they can settle all their affairs.

To Decide Guidelines On Schools

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP)— A 12-judge panel must rule on the constitutionality of U.S. Office of Education guidelines for integration of public schools of seven Southern districts.

The panel is being asked to decide whether the U.S. Supreme Court 1954 school decision demands forced integration and whether this applies in all sections of the country as well as the South.

"The question is: If you have a true freedom of choice and it does not result in substantial integration, do you have a constitutional violation?" is the view of Judge John C. Godbold of the 5th U.S. Cirtuit Court of Appeals.

The court withheld a decision Friday after arguments on a 2-1 ruling by a court panel upholding the guidelines and requiring steps to achieve integration.

"If there is a duty to integrate, then it applies nationwide," said attorney William G. Sommerville, one of a battery of lawyers for seven school boards in Louisiana and Alabama.

Sommerville and other school board attorneys argued that the Supreme Court's 1954 decision striking down school segregation was limited to "forced separation" of the races by state action.

The decree under review laid down the principle that states must take action "to reorganize school systems by integrating pupils, faculties, facilities, and activities.

The order would require desegregation of all grades and substantial faculty integration next fall in the seven districts directly involved; it would apply as controlling law to the entire circuit — Alabama, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas.

Judge John Minor Wisdom of New Orleans, who wrote the decision, held that integration guidelines stemmed from the South's past policy of segregation, but said his decision did not reach de facto segregation of the North because that resulted from residential patterns.

Both the attorneys and judges were divided on the issue.

Several of the judges indicated that they felt the burden of school integration should be shifted to the executive branch of government.

Sacred Heart Students Earn Honor Grades

Sacred Heart students on the fourth, six week's honor roll are: Seniors — Larry Burke, Melody Cunningham, Elizabeth Gerke, Mary Gerke, Estella Gravitt, Debra Myers, Sandra Reuter, Cathye Richardson, Jack Rouchka and Steve Rouchka. Juniors — Kathy Fischer, Marilyn Fischer, Richard Hoffmann, Mickey McGrath, Steve Schuber, Ron Schuster and Joyce Stoecklein. Sophomores — Dixie Kemp and Linda Zimmerschied. Freshmen—Judy Fischer and Rita Fischer.

Students must have a 90 per cent average with no grade below 85 to be on the honor roll.

Five Sacred Heart students have been given recognition in scholastic ability.

Elizabeth Gerke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leo H. Gerke, has earned the opportunity to apply for a scholarship to the University of Missouri. She was chosen over 46 seniors.

Four other senior students Cathye Richardson, Larry Burke, Sandra Reuter and Debra Myers, were granted "waver of fees". These students were chosen on their scholastic ability and scores received on the Ohio Psychological Test.

Jack Rouchka, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Rouchka, 600 East Ninth, senior at Sacred Heart, has been chosen student-of-the month for March. He is a member of youth business, cross country and varsity basketball.

Freshmen and sophomore Latin students will take the nationwide Latin examination, the results of which will be known later in the year. The students will be judged on their English as well as their Latin translations.

Sees New China Rift With Soviets

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — Soviet Ambassador Nikolai T. Fedorenko says he sees signs that Maoists in Red China are getting ready for "new provocations against the Soviet Union."

The head of the Soviet U.N. delegation, a Chinese - speaking expert who lived for years in China, spoke Friday to more than 800 U.S. college students who were in New York for a model U.N. General Assembly at a hotel.

The tall ambassador, a former professor, made his speech in English and answered questions in Russian, which was translated into English. In between, he lit a cigar and explained that it was "the best — Havana, of course." He added. "I salute my revolutionary solidarity." The crowd applauded.

Fedorenko, criticizing Chairman Mao Tse-tung of the Chinese Communist party, looked into the future and told the students:

"Where will Mao - Tse tung's group move? Everything shows that it is preparing the Chinese People's Republic for further adventuristic actions in the field of both domestic and foreign policy, not excluding new provocations against the Soviet Union.

"The adventuristic policy of this group holds in store for the Chinese people only a further aggravation of economic difficulties, a lowering of living standards, a worsening international situation and a prospect of China's economic isolation from the Socialist community.

Fedorenko said the Soviet Union would "carry out fully its obligation," undertaken in 1965, to make a substantial voluntary contribution for liquidation of the U.N. peacekeeping deficit, estimated at something like $30 million or more.

But he said: "We would like to know what are the intentions and plans of the other countries, and in the first instance of the United States, which also under the obligation must make a substantial voluntary contribution. We expect that the United States will carry out its promise and that it will make such a contribution."

New Court Plan Not Pending In '67 Legislature

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — Gov. Warren E. Hearnes' toll road proposal finally got through the Missouri Senate but is expected to face some amendments in the House.

Some of the main opposition in the Senate was that the bill did not nail down the expectation that the toll roads would become freeways once the revenue bonds were paid off.

Another objection was that the necessity for feasibility studies before a toll turnpike could be built was not spelled out in the bill.

The Associated Press has learned that amendments to take care of both these objections are being prepared and the governor is not expected to oppose them.

As a matter of fact, the amendments are expected to be offered in the House Roads and Highways Committee headed by Rep. Ruben Schapeler, D-Butler, who is for the bill.

One of the first feasibility studies is expected to be on a proposed turnpike extending south from Kansas City to the Arkansas line, which would probably run through Schapeler's district.

As the bill stands, feasibility studies of the state highway department would be available for consideration of the proposed turnpike authority. The prospective amendment would specify that feasbility studies would be made by independent engineering consultants.

A feasibility recommendation is necessary in order to sell the revenue bonds that would be issued to finance the toll roads.

The two changes—making the roads free after the bonds are paid off and providing for independent feasbility studies— will knock out two of the main objections raised by Republican Sens. Thomas G. Woolsey of Versailles and Jack Curtis of Springfield.

They are also expected to gain the support of the House minority floor leader, Rep. R. J. (Bus) King, who is for the toll road idea if it is properly limited.

One objection raised in the Senate was that as the bill was drafted originally, it would have permitted the tolls from one turnpike to be used to pay off the bonds of a road that was not paying its way.

Freelance Photographer Is Killed

SAIGON (AP) — Ronald D. Gallagher, a freelance photographer who worked for Kansas and Missouri newspapers, was killed today while covering a unit of the U. S. 9th Infantry Division in a combat action about 20 miles south-southwest of Saigon. He was 27.

Gallagher was the ninth correspondent killed in the Vietnam war. The last previous death was that of author-historian Bernard B. Fall, killed Feb. 21 while with U. S. Marines near the northern city of Hue. More than 30 news correspondents have been wounded in the war.

Gallagher arrived in Vietnam last December and had planned to remain six to eight months. He was accredited to the U. S. command here to work for the Topeka, Kan., Capital - Journal, the Joplin, Mo., Globe and the Fort Scott, Kan., Tribune.

His relatives live in Fort Scott (501 Sunset Drive). He was born in Coffeyville, Kan.

Gallagher was killed while with a company of the 9th Division in rice field southwest of Saigon in the Rach Kien area.

Reports from the scene said he met death under an accidental U.S. artillery barrage which landed among American infantrymen.

(The U.S. command reported a "short round" killed four American soldiers and wounded eight in the action).

Eyewitnesses said Gallagher was with an advancing unit when six or more rounds of U.S. artillery fire landed in their positions. At the time, Gallagher was with Charlie Company, 39th Infantry, of the 3rd Brigade, 9th Infantry Division.

Seeking Unity In New York Demo Party

NEW YORK (AP) — Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, has called for unity among New York City Democrats after Tammany Hall leader J. Raymond Jones resigned in a rift with Kennedy.

Jones, 67, the first and only Negro county chairman in the country, resigned Friday as the Manhattan Democratic leader.

He cited a lack of support by Kennedy as one of the major reasons. He said Kennedy is "the power in the state."

"Ray Jones may have had his own reasons for resigning," Kennedy said in a statement from Washington. "In any event, our record of success in New York County has not been exactly spectacular."

"For all of us in the Democratic party," Kennedy continued, "the main point now is to get together all elements of the party, to build a strong organization, to work for all the people of New York."

The Democrats lost control of City Hall to the Republicans when Mayor John V. Lindsay was elected in 1965. Last year, Democrat Frank D. O'Connor, City Council president, lost in his bid to unseat Republican Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller.

Some political observers trace the rift between Kennedy and Jones to the Democratic National Convention in 1960 when Jones was one of the four New York delegates who voted to nominate Lyndon B. Johnson for president instead of John F. Kennedy.

Jones, who entered New York politics 45 years ago and took over Tammany Hall in December 1964, told newsmen he felt he should give Kennedy a chance to organize New York County and "run it as he will."

Greek Capital Runs Out Of Burial Space

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — Athens Mayor George Plytas said today the Greek capital has run out of burial space and must take emergency measures to provide more graves for its dead.

As a short term solution, Athens will build a catacomb and rearrange the existing ground-level cemeteries to accommodate another layer of bodies.

The catacomb will be located beneath the existing "First Cemetery" near the Panathenean Stadium, site of the first modern Olympics in 1896.

When completed the underground cemetery will probably have five tiers of tombs along its walls.

Plytas cites religion as one reason for the lack of burial space. The Greek Orthodox Church forbids cremation, which is becoming popular in many countries.

The catacomb has been approved by the church, the mayor says.

Estate Valued At $100-Million

NEW YORK (AP) — The Henry R. Luce, editorial chairman of Time, Inc., established in 1923 with an investment of $86,000, left an estate estimated at more than $100 million.

Luce died Feb. 28 in Phoenix, Ariz.

The will, filed for probate Friday in Surrogate's Court, names his widow, Clare Boothe Luce, as his principal heir, with the Henry Luce Foundation — controlled by his family — becoming the principal stockholder in the Time, Inc., communications empire.

The Henry Luce Foundation, a charitable organization, was established by Luce in 1963 to honor his father, Henry Winters Luce, a Presbyerian missionary. It will hold approximately 12.7 per cent of Time, Inc., stock, which has a total value now of about $690 million.

The corporation publishes Time, Life, Fortune and Sports Illustrated magazines and Time-Life Books. It has annual sales of more than $500 million.

Smoking In Decrease

COPENHAGEN (AP) — Published statistics report that due to private antismoking campaigns and increased tobacco prices cigarette consumption in Denmark dropped last year by about one pack annually per person from the peak smoking year 1963. The figures showed Danes smoked about 60 twenty-cigarette packs per capita in 1966. A pack of 20 local king-size cigarettes costs 6½ crowns (94 cents).

Wondering How Bills Are Passed

By GEORGE SMITH
Associated Press Writer

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — After following the Missouri Legislature for several months and watching the progress of legislation, the thought occurs that it's a wonder any bill ever gets through.

It was designed this way.

Otherwise, Missouri would have so many laws about so many things that no one could do anything—legally.

A bill is introduced. It is referred to a committee. Its sponsor tells the committee why it should be enacted. Opponents are heard. Committee members weigh in with their ideas. It is flayed and beaten, stomped on and kicked around.

If it survives, it comes before the Senate or the House.

Opponents again can argue against it, and they also can tack on amendments.

It must be approved for the first time by the entire body, either House or Senate. It comes back for further debate. If it finally passes, it goes to the other house.

The whole process starts over again. If he alternate house changes it in anyway, it goes back to the original house.

If the changes are rejected, a conference committee from the Senate and the House try for a compromise.

Their version comes back before each house. If finally passed, it goes to the governor. If he turns it down, it probably is dead. It takes a two-thirds majority of both the Senate and House to over-ride the veto, and this seldom is possible.

So just introducing a bill doesn't mean much. Many a bill is introduced with the sponsor knowing full well it doesn't have a chance.

Some bills are introduced to satisfy pressure groups at home. The legislator can say he has done his best.

Some bills are called "sandbaggers." A legislator is paid to introduce them, or he puts them in with the expectation of getting paid to withdraw them.

So the long, drawn out process is sometimes a blessing.

If you feel the urge for a crusade to make the dandelion the state flower, you can probably get a bill introduced. Don't expect any more.

Rescuers Save Two Horses From Cistern

KANSAS CITY (AP)—A couple of horses just horsin' around fell into an old cistern on a farm west of Kansas City and were trapped in the underground rainwater reservoir five hours before rescuers dug them out Friday.

The animals, a gelding and a colt, emerged from the muddy hole, none the worst for their experience, except for a good drenching.

When ordinary rescue methods failed, a highloader was summoned from Kansas City and scooped out a ditch, exposing the bottom of the cistern.

Rescuers opened its brick wall wiht picks and shovels and led the horses to safety.

The cistern is 18 feet deep, and the horses had to squeeze through a narrow opening after nudging a wooden cover out of the way.

"I just don't see how they got down there," said Bert Gast, fire chief of Lenexa, Kan., a Kansas City suburb. "That hole is only two feet square, and they're a lot bigger than that."

The Ohio Indiana line passes through Harrison, Ohio which was named for William Henry Harrison.

Review Of Buisness

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It was a week which demonstrated once again the inevitability of death and taxes — and, of course, politics.

The situation in Vietnam seemed neither much better nor much worse, though 1,617 U.S. casualties set a seven-day record for the war.

President Johnson disclosed that he plans to confer later this month "in the Pacific area somethere" with Henry Cabot Lodge, his ambassador to Saigon, and Gen. William C. Westmoreland, his commander in Vietnam.

The President announced plans for changes in the military draft system to put 19-year-olds in uniform first and tighten up on deferments.

He asked Congress to restore the 7 per cent tax credit for business building and equipment purchases which was repealed five months ago. He said he still wants a 6 per cent income tax surcharge, effective July 1, to help pay for the fighting in Vietnam.

Johnson told a news conference that it probably will be several months from now before he will announce whether he plans to run in 1068. He made it pretty clear that if he does run, Vice President Hubert H. Humphrey will be on the Democratic ticket with him.

In Vietnam, it was announced that in the week ended March 4, American casualties totaled 232 dead, 1,381 wounded and 4 missing. The total of casualties, but not of deaths, was the war's highest for a seven-day period. The one-week record number of deaths—240 — was set during the Ia Drang Valley battle of November 1965.

By unofficial tabulation, U.S. combat dead up to last Saturday midnight totaled 7,929, with 45,836 wounded.

Sen. Robert F. Kennedy's proposal for a seven-day bombing halt coupled with an invitation to Hanoi to talk peace received a presidential shrugoff.

"Individuals have different approaches to this matter," Johnson told his news conference. "some of them do need more information sometimes."

Johnson added that "we are willing to talk unconditionally or we are willing to talk conditionally. All we ask is equity and fairness, and that the other side do likewise."

However, the Labor Government's term of office has four years to run unless Wilson decides to "go to the country" sooner—and with a House of Commons majority of more than 90 he has no immediate reason to do so.

India's ruling Congress party had political troubles too.

The party suffered severe losses in the national elections last month. Some of its leaders want Prime Minister Indira Gandhi to step down and former finance minister Morarji Desai announced that he would run against her in the party caucus.

Chaos continued in Red China, with Mao Tse-tung resorting to big-scale force in his effort to re-establish his sway over the world's most populous country.

In Canton, more than 170 were killed in an attack by Maoist Red Guards on a Communist Party office building. Another 1,000 anti-Maoists, mostly factory workers, were arrested by army troops.

Peking radio appealed to peasants to "stimulate production," an apparent hint that agriculture has bogged down in the general disorder, threatening the nation's food supplies.

James Riddle Hoffa, 54-year-old czar of America's Teamsters Union, ran out of legal delays and was taken handcuffed to a federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa., to start serving an eight-year sentence for jury tampering.

"If this government can do this to a Hoffa, they can do it to any American citizen," he complained.

Hoffa could be eligible for parole in 32 months. Meanwhile, General Vice President Frank Fitzsimmons, a longtime associate, will run the union's affairs.

Adam Clayton Powell, ousted from his House seat for various misdemeanors after 22 years in Congress, started court action alleging that the House decision violated his constitutional rights.

Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller of New York ordered a special election April 11 to fill the vacancy in the predominantly Negro Harlem district of New York City which has elected Powell 11 times.

Powell said he would run again if the courts refused to help him. Named by the Republicans to oppose Powell was James H. Meredity, who won national attention as the first of his race to break the color bar at the University of Mississippi.

A toy store chain announced in New York that it plans to start selling an anatomically realistic boy doll. Said Frank Caplan, general manager of the chain:

"I think it is high time Americans accept the fact that boys are boys and girls are girls."

It was a week of sad memories for veteran moviegoers, marked by the deaths of Nelson Eddy, Mischa Auer, Kenneth Harlan and "Freckles" of the "Our Gang" comedies.

Eddy, romantic film baritone of a generation ago, was stricken during a night club show in Miami Beach and died a few hours later. He was 65.

Eddy and red-haired Jeanette MacDonald sang their way to a stardom in eight films from 1935 to 1942, including "Naughty Marietta" and "I Married An Angel." Miss MacDonald died in 1965.

Russia-born Auer, a long-faced, pop-eyed comic whose movie career began in 1928, died of a heart attack at his home in Rome. The phrase "Confidentially, it stinks," which he uttered in "You Can't Take It With You," became a part of the American idiom. Auer was 61.

Harlan, a pioneer actor of the silents, died at 71 in a hospital in Sacramento, Calif. He made his first film in 1916.

John F. Bothwell, who was "Freckles" in his younger days, died in Long Branch, N.J., at 46.

Notables in other fields who died during the week included:

Alice B. Toklas, 89, longtime friend of Gertrude Stein, in Paris.

Roger Babson, 91, a business analyst who predicted the 1929 depression (and ran for president on the Prohibition ticket in 1940) in Lake Wales, Fla.

Dr. Mohammed Mossadegh, 86, who engineered the seizure of Iran's oil fields from the British in 1951 and later became premier, in Tehran.

Berta Hummeln creator of the famous Hummel figures died on Nov. 6, 1946, at the age of 37.

People In City Depend On Nature

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—No one is as dependent on nature as someone who lives in a big city.

When you dwell in a rural area, you can more or less take nature for granted, as a child is unconscious of the beauty of youth.

The unfolding pageantry of cloud and landscape almost escapes attention. There is a surfeit of nature in the country, and many who live there are so accustomed to its daily splendor that they do not feel compelled to pause and worship its wonder anymore than a fish in the sea feels the need to admire the miracle of water.

But when you regularly plod cement pathways and earn a living in manmade huddles of high stone and glass, you get a lonesomeness for natural things that at times overpowers you. Your mind aches for that acre of your own that every human heart aspires to.

You want a place to plant something and harvest it, an animal you can take care of as it helps take care of you: a horse, a cow, a chicken, a pig.

The longer you live in the blue smog of cities the more imperative this hunger for nature becomes. In time your yearning tends to turn you into a pigeon feeder or a squirrel feeder.

My pleasure is to feed squirrels. In the well-landscaped tenement where I've paid the landlord's fee for nearly two decades there are about half a dozen squirrels.

My favorite used to be one I nicknamed "Greedy."

Each morning I put half a dozen or so pecans in my pocket, and toss them to the squirrels. Most grab them and scamper off and bury them.

"Greedy," however, began to regard me as his personal property. He would chase the other squirrels away, and come up and take the nuts from my hand.

For some days, however, I missed "Greedy" and gave all my pecans to the younger squirrels. I complained about the absence of "Greedy" to my wife and daughter.

Just the other evening I overheard my daughter Tracy say to my wife Frances:

"Mama, you know when I was going across the street to the supermarket last week I saw a squirrel that had been run over. Do you suppose that is the one that Daddy keeps talking about?"

Now there is a vast emptiness in my life, and I feel in a way insecure, missing a companionship I had leaned on.

Of course, I still do have my favorite tree. I don't know what kind it is, but it has wide and wonderful arms that soon will hold up to heaven a canopy of green leaves.

I like to pet its branches when I go by — if I am sure no stranger is looking who might deem me daffy. The night before last, returning with my wife from a Chinese restaurant, I paused at my tree, reached out my hand and was consoled by the feeling of buds ruffling along a brown branch, births of being impatient to burst into spring glory.

"Don't you have a favorite tree of your own?" I asked my wife.

"No," said Frances, "there aren't enough trees here for everybody — so I'll just share yours."

And she put her arm in mine as we walked the last few steps to home.

Washington Capsules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Officials say South Korean forces fighting in Vietnam will receive a shipment of U.S. M16 lightweight rifles next month rather than in May or June as originally scheduled.

The officials said the speedup was caused by the furor over the disclosure that 20,300 AR15 rifles — the civilian model of the rapid fire M16 — were sold directly to the Singapore government by the Colt Arms Manufacturing Co.

The Koreans want modern rifles for their troops along the frontier with North Korea as well as those in Vietnam who still are armed with World War II model weapons.

The arms sale disclosure caused Korean Defense Minister Kim Sung-eun to announce Thursday he will ask that modern weapons be supplied to the 45,000 Koreans now in Vietnam.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Some U.S. officials believe the internal turmoil inside Communist China is indicative of the death of communism as an international ideology.

They contend that communism has become increasingly parochial, thus making it more difficult to provide Communist nations with unified central direction.

At the same time, other officials said, Asians fear Communist China more now than they did two years ago when the Peking regime seemed united.

They explain that previously there was fear of Chinese border expansion and fear of communism itself. The current turmoil and struggle for leadership has caused uncertainty about what China might do next, they said.

What They Say

JOHN L. BEATTY (Manager, Cablevision, Inc.) — At the Fourth Ward Democratic caucus meeting held at Horace Mann School Thursday evening, one of Sedalia's oldest rhetorical Homo sapiens was at it again, and this time the forked tongue was aimed at me. He informed my friends and neighbors of the Fourth Ward that I was an "alleged" Democrat. I am 40 years old and have been a registered Democrat since I was old enough to vote. What does it take to be a Democrat? I always thought I was one, but apparently there are qualities needed of which I am unaware.

The same speaker said that I had "carefully" polled the Council trying to get the city to raise the Cablevision rates to the consumer. I will go a long way before I say anyone is purveyor of misinformation — but I will say that his statement is not the truth. I have never at any time polled the Council — carefully or otherwise — trying to get our consumer rates raised. How could the Democrats (or Republicans) refuse to go along with something that has never been asked of them. If the Republicans are sympathetic with me, it is the first time I have heard about it. I certainly wish that the sympathetic Republicans would step forward and make themselves known to me. I, as an "alleged" Democrat, have not tried to run a Republican on the Democratic ticket. The speaker at the Fourth Ward meeting who seemed so steamed up, indicated that I was now running Mr. Kenneth Schilb as an Independent. This isn't so. Mr. Schilb has filed to run on the Citizens Ticket. It is unfortunate that the speaker chose to drag Mr. Schilb into all of this because Mr. Schilb is a gentleman, and if elected would do a fine job.

What tactics our querulous speaker "deplores" are unknown to me. There are many Cablevision stockholder meetings. I might add that at the meetings he does a fine job of keeping quiet. Perhaps his extemporaneous speeches are not extemporaneous.

Those people of the Fourth Ward may consider themselves blessed indeed if they can tolerate being bored by superfulous speakers who take it upon themselves to rocket off into such oratorical orbit over an issue which is not an issue at all.

Surcharge

pear during the second half of this year.

"All our economic projections have been worked out with the surtax included," he said.

The administration anticipates a sluggish first half but expects an upswing during the second half and is sticking to that prediction despite the current economic slowdown.

Failure of Congress to enact the surtax would drop in the administration's lap the largest budget deficit since World War II unless spending were cut drastically.

President Johnson figured on an $8.1 billion deficit for the fiscal year which begins July 1 but that included the extra $4.7 billion in revenue the surtax would raise. Without it the deficit would rise to almost $13 billion.

The surtax would increase the tax bills of all corporations and most individuals by 6 per cent.

Police

beaten at the police station — a claim city attorneys said Wainwright had never backed with proof.

A New York case still pending presents the issue more squarely.

The New York law was passed in 1964 expressly in reaction to a 1961 Supreme Court decision in which the Fourth Amendment ban on illegal searches and seizures was applied, for the first time, to the states.

A standing committee of the Star Bar Association attacked the anticrime measure before it became law with the statement: "Nowhere in the history of Anglo-Saxon jurisprudence have we so closely approached a police state as in this proposal."

Convention Of Moose Lodge Here

Sedalia Moose Lodge 1494 is sponsor of the 22nd Annual Missouri State Moose Association's Mid-Winter Conference, under the direction of Larry Riley, conference general chairman, which began Friday and ends today, to decide the state winners in ritualistic competition.

Conference agenda highlights included the opening address by Paul Bainter, master of ceremonies and regional director, followed by the main event, degree staff competition, which was held in the Knights of Columbus Building, under T. W. Murphy, state ritual chairman.

Saturday's program brought Mayor Ralph Walker, who is class representative to the speaker's stand to give a welcoming address to the nearly 500 Moose members and guests registered for the conference. The delegates heard progress and competition reports from state and district officers and chairman throughout the conference. Saturday's "25-Club" cocktail party highlighted the evening activities.

Today the conference is back to main event competition with the completion of the ritual team competition. A full outcome report on this event will be given to the members at the close of the conference this morning.

The Women of the Moose were not excluded from this conference, as they held their opening session Saturday with the Conference Leader Jennie Brown presiding. The speaker of the day was Antoinette Marinello, director of chapter activities.

The Sedalia Chapter 1494 enrolled 33 new members to its already large area membership.

Distinguished guests included Don Kessner, vice-president, Second District, Hannibal; Al Gleiber, secretary of the Missouri Moose Association, Maplewood; Lloyd Dewschke, past state president, Sedalia; Paul Bainter, regional director, St. Joseph; Art Ranney, state president, Kirksville; Harry Howard, director of ritual, Mooseheart, Ill.; Ralph Walker, Mayor of Sedalia, class representative; R. E. Michaelis, governor of Sedalia Lodge 1494; J. Warren Henderson, deputy supreme governor, Sedalia; Floyd Thompson, ritual judge, Marshalltown, Iowa; Joe Murawski, vice-president, First District, St. Joseph; Larry Riley, secretary of Sedalia Lodge 1494.

Republicans

from both the citizens of Sedalia and outsiders.

He concluded his remarks by pointing out that "last year the Democrats tried to get elected by promising to bring the charter form of city government to Sedalia. The three Republican Councilmen will back me up on this—not one of them (the Democrat incumbents), not once have they initiated any discussion or proposed any constructive action along this line. What are we to think, that this was another one of their idle campaign promises?"

Jerry (Bud) Jones, Councilman from the Third Ward, asked if those present had read the account of the Democratic Fourth Ward caucus and remarks made by William F. Brown. Jones said that the Republican councilmen are firm on two points: first, that the original agreement made with the City of Sedalia by Mr. Brown for Cablevision, Inc., should be honored as Mr. Brown so positively argued at the time that his clients could guarantee better than any other company. Secondly, that the Republican councilmen are firm that there should not be an increase in charges to subscribers or a decrease in fees paid to the city.

Plane Wreckage Is Found Along Border

STIGLER, Okla.)ap) — The wreckage of a light plane — apparently one which has been sought for almost a week along the Missouri -Arkansas -Oklahoma borders — was found Saturday by a farmer in remote hill country in southeast Oklahoma.

Frank Ford told sheriff's officers he found a body in the wreckage. Officers started for the crash site.

Ford said the number on the plane was N708A, and this lacked one digit of corresponding with the marking on a Cessna 172 flown by Jerold Ridges of Shreveport, La. who disappeared Sunday on a flight from Neosho, Mo., to Fort Smith, Ark.

The crash site is between Stigler and the community of Lequire, just north of the Low Sanbois Mountains.

Rhoads complained of his back and was taken to the Bothwell Hospital in a McLaughlin ambulance.

She reported they were stolen when she was away from her place either downtown shopping or while away attending church. The gun, she said, was registered at the courthouse. She reported they were taken recently.

Police received a report of children throwing rocks at other children at 914 East Seventh Saturday.

● Fires In City

The Sedalia Fire Department made two calls Saturday to extinguish a grass fire and a trash fire.

The first call came at 10:44 a.m., sending them to 303 East Johnson for a trash fire. The second call came at 1 p.m. for their assistance in extinguishing a grass fire at 1600 East 16th.

No damage resulted from either fire.

Sedalia firemen were called to a garage between 1308 and 1310 East Seventh about 9 p.m. Saturday, where a fire caused by a short in wiring had set the building and contents ablaze. The joint owners of the garage are Roy Schnakenberg and Dencil Eichholz.

Damage amounted to $150 to the garage and $350 to the contents. One booster line was used to extinguish the blaze.

Lee "Skipper" Quinn

Lee Quinn To Speak At Knife, Fork Guest Night

Lee "Skipper" Quinn, adventuresome and personable, will be the speaker at the guest night program of the Sedalia Knife and Fork Club dinner meeting which will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, at Bothwell Hotel.

Quinn has a story of amazing adventure. He is skipper-owner of yacht Neophyte which sailed around the world with an all-girl crew. He has been a steeplejack, deep-sea diver, auto racer and mountain climber. His experiences have brought him national attention and Hollywood is making him the subject of a movie. Last summer his yacht was cut apart and wrecked in South Pacific but all hands aboard were saved.

In spite of all the things he had done he did not come to the public eye until a couple of years ago when he concluded sailing the "Seven Seas" with an all-girl crew, which he insists was as efficient as any sea-going "salts" of his experience.

Reservations are to be in by Tuesday, March 14.

Architectural Firm Involved In Building Of Nursing Homes

Announcement of the allocation of federal Hill-Harris funds for the construction of nursing homes in Missouri involved a local architectural firm.

Five projects are to receive aid. Sammons and Buller are architects for two of the projects.

Braymer, Mo., received funds for the construction of a 50-bed nursing home.

Putnam County received funds for the construction of a 46-bed home adjacent to the Putnam County Hospital. Also involved is the addition of 18 beds to the hospital.

Other nursing home projects to receive funds are Scotland County, Perryville and Smithville.

Young Boy Is Shot

ROLLA, Mo. (AP) — An 11-old boy was shot to death accidentally by a companion shooting at a turtle Saturday, the Missouri Highway Patrol said.

The victim was Michael Allen Rolufs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Rolufs of Rolla. The father is a lieutenant on the Rolla police force.

The patrol said Michael and two other boys were fishing from a boat at the Nagogami Lodge 13 miles north of Rolla. One of the boys was shooting at a turtle with a pistol, and Michael was hit when he stood up suddenly in the line of fire, the patrol said.

S-C Students To Present 'Our Town'

"Our Town," the Pulitzer prize-winning play by Thornton Wilder, will be presented by Smith-Cotton High School at 8 p. m. March 17, in the Smith-Cotton auditorium.

The entire play, under the direction of Mrs. Ellen Rodgers, takes place in Grover's Corners, New Hampshire, in 1901. The moving drama is the story of daily life, of love, marriage, and death.

The principal characters in the production are Craig Cassing, who portrays the stage manager, Ginny Benitz, Andy Alexander, Bud Clark, Barbara Roseboom, Jennifer Van Vickle and Jim Denny. Other characters are portrayed by Mike Farley, Becky Speaker, David Nichols, Wayne Christian, Tom Reisdorph, Jessica Brown, Jeanne Vawter, Steve Schondelmeyer, Tracy Strombom Charles Stanley, Vincent Johnson, Tony Cassing and David Jones. Student directors are Jim Carter, Ann Fitzwilliam and Cindy Delph.

As the stage manager tells the audience the entire story of the village and its people, the actors behind him go about their daily tasks. Sometimes a full scene is enacted with the stage manager taking part, but at other times he retires to a corner to watch.

This unusual play has few properties and no sets. Much of the action is pantomime. The stage manager gives the play unity and makes the play intensely real by calling on each viewer to supply details of his own life as he realizes how much he has in common with all that happens, according to Mrs. Rodgers. "Our Town" is enriched by imagination, and is the best loved play of the American stage.

For the last month, members of the cast have been rehearsing almost nightly to prepare for the production, Mrs. Rodgers stated.

Study End To Ban On Wives In Vietnam

SAIGON (AP) — The U.S. embassy is reported studying whether to end a two-year ban that keeps wives of American officials from living in Vietnam.

Wives, children and other dependents of American diplomats, soldiers and contractors were ordered out as a safety measure in February 1965 after a rise in Viet Cong terrorism within Saigon. About 2,000 were affected.

American women holding office jobs were exempt. There are hundreds of secretaries in the embassy and in private firms. Some are the wives of American civilians working in Vietnam.

The families of some officials returned to the United States, but many now live in Bangkok, Manila and Hong Kong.

Government employes may visit their families in these Asian cities periodically at government expense.

Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge's wife lives in Bangkok. She returned for a visit recently when the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, Arthur J. Goldberg, brought his wife to Saigon on an Asian tour.

Children will continue to be barred mainly because of the lack of schools.

A Pattern for Character

"The country is going to the dogs!"

That's what the cynics have been telling us for decades, but we don't believe them.

Enough adults and youngsters with high ideals are on the American scene to refute cynics who see little hope for the future.

Among those with more optimistic outlook are the Girl Scouts and their leaders who this week observe the organization's 55th birthday anniversary as a reminder that youth, hope and high ideals are a living testimony to this year's theme: "Values to Hold—Worlds to Explore."

Here is a national organization with an informal educational and recreational program open to all girls 7 through 17 years of age who promise to serve God and country and aid other people. Its purpose is to help girls develop as happy, resourceful individuals willing to share their abilities as citizens in their homes, their communities, their country and the world.

These values continue to be those instilled by the founder of the Girl Scouts, Juliette Gordon Low.

In this day when skepticism and materialism are so much in evidence, when so many young people are rebelling against restraint of any kind, the importance of such organizations as the Girl Scouts must be recognized. Three million Girl Scouts represent a mighty force among American youth — a constructive force that inspires meaningful answers to many of today's problems which confront all young people.

Girls of today set the pattern for the world of tomorrow. Those who are identified with the Girl Scout movement play a major role in making this pattern a guide to personal good character.

Someone has said that Girl Scouting can make the difference in the kind of a woman a girl becomes. We would like to add that Girl Scouting makes the difference in the kind of a world the nations become.

Herewith, then, is an unqualified endorsement of the Girl Scouts and their dedicated leaders on this 55th birthday anniversary.

Freshmen Ask For Equal Standards

DREW PEARSON
and JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — It is a House tradition that freshmen should be seen and not heard, but the 46 freshmen Republicans have boldly called upon their seniors to apply the same ethical yardstick to all Congressmen that was used to judge Adam Clayton Powell.

What was wrong for Powell, they said in effect, is wrong for his colleagues who voted to throw him out of Congress.

No individual Congressman, they declared, should be "judged against any special standard against which we are not all ready and willing to be judged."

In this spirit, we are ready to offer evidence to the appropriate House Committee — if the House ever establishes one—that Rep. L. Mendel Rivers, D-S.C., is unfit to continue as chairman of the sensitive House Armed Services committee.

Not only does his drinking problem make him a security risk, but he has used his influence at the Pentagon to help defense contractors. We have carefully documented, for example, how he brought pressure upon the Military Sea Transportation Service to pay the Power Equipment Corporation $104,394 more than its contract allowed for repairing the Navy transport Randall.

It may be merely a coincidence that his law partner, at the time, T. E. Pedersen, represented various defense contractors.

"I always represented these clients on an individual basis," Pedersen assured us. The Congressman had nothing to do with them."

Pedersen added that his legal work for defense contractors picked up after he stopped practicing law with Rivers. Pedersen also said he was affiliated with the Washington law firm of Sellers, Conner and Cuneo, which specializes in Government contract work.

By another interesting coincidence, this happens to be the law firm that represented the Power Equipment Corporation in its efforts to squeeze more money out of the taxpayers.

Alliliation Denied

Gilbert A. Cuneo, one of the partners, denied that his firm is "affiliated" with either Pedersen or Rivers, though this was the word used by Pedersen to describe the relationship. Cuneo claimed that Pedersen had brought only one case to his firm, involving a Polaris submarine subcontract.

Cuneo admitted that Pedersen drops into the office when he's in Washington. Also that Rep. Rivers's name has been brought up in their conversations.

"But," Cuneo added with emphasis, "I wouldn't know Mendel Rivers if he walked into this room."

Thus it must have been for a complete stranger that Rivers interceded to get the $104,394 which Power Equipment was demanding for "extra work." Because there is no other known link between the Congressman and the Corporation, which was located in Brooklyn.

Rivers has a keen sense of geography. He delivers frequent speeches about the glories of his native South Carolina. Not only his oratory but his voting record suggests that he has little in common with the people of Brooklyn.

Yet he intervened with the Military Sea Transportation Service to help a Brooklyn Corporation. Rivers got on the phone to Vice Admiral John "Dutch" Will, then the MSTS commander, and now President of American Export Lines.

"What's all this trouble over extras?" Rivers began the conversation, referring to Power Equipment's claim. He asked the Admiral to see Joe Kelly, who was pushing the Company's claim in Washington.

The Admiral, who knew who buttered the Navy's bread in Congress, phoned his commander in Brooklyn, Rear Admiral D. T. Eller, and ordered him to negotiate with Kelly. The phone call was made while Kelly, all smiles, was still seated across the desk from Will.

While the negotiations were in progress, Rivers read a flattering biography of Admiral Will into the Congressional record.

" 'Dutch' Will, as he is admiringly known to his friends in the Navy and in Maritime circles, is an Admiral's Admiral," solemnly declared Rivers.

With Rivers in the act, Power Equipment jacked up its claim to $173,150.61 but finally settled for $104,394.

It will be interesting to see whether the House treats Rivers the same as it did Powell. It should also be worth watching the response of Rep. Albert Watson, R-S.C., and Durward Hall, R-Mo., who led the House assault upon Powell but earlier defended Rivers's conduct.

Conservationist?

This column reported recently that Federal officials were red-faced over having given an anti-air pollution award to Louis A. Wehde of the Ford Motor Company at exactly the time the Ford plant at Dearborn, Mich., was accused of being a major contributor to air pollution.

A similar case has come to light in Wisconsin. Gov. Warren P. Knowles recently presented an award to Guido Rahr of Manitowoc, Wis., as "Conservationist of the Year." And the Wisconsin Conservationist in commenting on the award, said: "Mr. Rahr's accomplishments in conservation are phenomenal. . . few approach Guido Rahr's prowess as a Conservation Missionary."

What was not mentioned was the fact that a Federal investigation of interstate pollution of the upper Mississippi river system in the Minneapolis-St. Paul area had found the Rahr Malting Company which Guido Rahr heads to be one of the main polluters of those water resources. The pollution is so severe that it makes the Mississippi and sections of Lake Pepin in both Wisconsin and Minnesota unfit for boating, water skiing, swimming and even fishing. And the Rahr Malting Company is listed as the fourth worst contributor to this pollution.

Yet the man who heads it has been named Wisconsin's "Conservationist of the Year."

Looking Backward

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Hedderich and son, P. J., Mr. and Mrs. George H. Scruton, Kenneth Husbands and Joe Hugleman spent the day fishing at Bennett Springs.

—1942—

Within its alloted program time, the Sedalia Kiwanis club observed its 20th birthday with a bangup program. Philip McLaughlin was program chairman. Ed McLaughlin, chairman of the education committee, made a talk on the history of the club, stating that the charter application was made February 20, 1922 and the charter issued March 11, 1922 by Kiwanis International. The principal speaker was John Calvin Broomfield, of the Methodist church,, St. Louis, introduced by the Rev. H. U. Campbell, vice-president. Candles on a birthday cake were lighted by Mrs. Howard Roberts, blown out by Mrs. Paul Hedderich, wife of a past president, and the cake was cut by Mrs. George H. Scruton, wife of the president.

Review of Week's News

NEW YORK (AP) — President Johnson, declaring that "the imbalance in our economy that we were aiming at has been righted," asked Congress this week to restore the 7 per cent tax credit for business investment in new equipment and machinery.

While indicating satisfaction with the way the economy has been performing, Johnson told a news conference Thursday that he saw no reason to withdraw his recommendation for a 6 per cent income tax surcharge.

The investment credit was suspended last fall to help curb inflation stemming from an overheated economy.

Now, Johnson said, it is "clear that the temporary suspension has done the job that we hoped and expected it would do."

He called attention to reduced interest rates, a normal flow of funds into savings and loan associations, easing of skilled labor shortages and of excessive demand pressures on machinery makers, and a survey showing businesses plan only a 3.9 per cent increase in business capital outlay.

Among the first business leaders to comment on the President's recommendation was Roger M. Blough, chairman of U.S. Steel Corp., who said restoration of the investment tax credit would "certainly be beneficial to the whole economy."

"By stimulating investment in new facilities the restoration of the tax credit would work to enlarge the supply of goods, increase productive efficiency and thus tend to relieve possible inflationary pressures," he added. "Congress, I believe, should act promptly on this proposal."

A slowdown in business spending in the first half of this year and a pickup in the second half, with the net result being a 3.9 per cent gain for the year, was predicted Wednesday by the Commerce Department and the Securities and Exchange Commission.

This increase to an estimated $63 billion would be far smaller than the 16.7 per cent growth to a record $60.63 billion last year.

The survey showed that businesses now expect to spend in the current quarter 1.5 per cent less than they did when the last survey was taken three months earlier, and that their plans for the second quarter have been reduced by 3 per cent.

The report said most major kinds of business plan smaller increases in capital outlays this year than last with a sizable minority planning reductions.

Railroads plan a 25.3 per cent cutback to $1.48 billion after a 14.2 per cent increase in 1966. All manufacturers plan a 3.5 per cent increase to $27.94 billion after a 20.2 per cent increase last year.

The total includes decreases planned by the auto and the nonautomotive-transport- goods makers, the stone, clay and glass, the textile and the miscellaneous durable and nondurable goods groupings.

The National Association of Purchasing Agents reported new ordering by its members declined in February from the January level. This cut into production and shortened the lead time on deliveries for the first time in a year.

The association's survey showed that only 18 per cent of its members in February boosted their ordering from January, compared with the 23 per cent that had noted an increase in January from December. The percentage reporting higher orders last month was the slimmest since the end of the 1960-61 recession.

The Federal National Mortgage Association said the aid it will make available to the housing industry will provide financing for about 27,000 units.

President Johnson had announced earlier that the agency will make $380 million available for special mortgage aid and increase the price it pays for mortgages bought from private lenders.

The agency said $300 million of the funds will be used to purchase mortgages for new single-family low and moderate cost housing.

The Federal Home Loan Bank of Chicago cut the interest rates on loans to member savings and loan associations to 5½ per cent from 5¾ per cent. John E. Stipp, president, said the new rate should help members in financing the housing market.

Most major retail chains posted modest sales gains in February from a year earlier. They included Sears, Roebuck & Co., 3.7 per cent, F.W. Woolworth Co. 4.2 per cent, W.T. Grant Co., 1.16 per cent, Gamble-Skogmo, Inc., 5 per cent, and S.S. Kresge Co., 17.6 per cent. Montgomery Ward & Co. reported a decline of 2.8 per cent.

Automobile production spurted this week to an estimated 159,000 passenger cars from 95,521 last week, when output at General Motors Corp. was still recovering from a wildcat strike at a key parts plant in Mansfield, Ohio. A year ago the industry built 200,916 cars.

Another wildcat strike broke out in Mansfield this week and General Motors indicated it may try to move some of the crucial parts fabricating work done there to other plants.

Steel production last week declined 2.1 per cent to 2,528,000 tons from 2,582,000 tons the previous week.

March Variety

March is a month that is always teasing,
One day its hot, the next day its freezing,
Through the wind whistling a merry tune,
Making false promises of spring too soon;
Warming the days till you think its around,
Coaxing the little flowers out of the ground,
Whispering to them that its time to awake
Then turning on cold till they shiver and shake,
Urging us to wear new spring clothes
Then laughing to see us look about froze
Never know what this month to forecast
For he brings back the winter that we think is passed,
No matter our coats, he bustles right in Right through the layers, it seems, to the skin,
He blows off our hats, he musses our hair,
Clouds up the skies that started out fair,
Turns warm rain to sleet and maybe to snow,
What he will do next we just never know,
And then when we think old winter's come back
He opens up his bright springtime sack,
The wind turns to breeze, the ice becomes puddles,
This unpredictable month then befuddles,
What next to expect we just never know,
From temperatures warm to maybe below,
Then he smiles his gay smile and turns on his charm
To give us some days that are sunshiny warm,
For fun then he empties a bucket of rain,
"I like" he says, "to hear folks complain,
"If I usher in spring too fast things will grow
"So I simply put on a variety show."

Difficult To Support LBJ Policy

LONDON (AP)—Harold Wilson is finding it increasingly difficult to go on staunchly supporting President Johnson's Vietnam policies.

Despite some evident embarrassments the British prime minister shows no signs of abandoning his pro-American stance.

His problems over Vietnam are nearly as old as his 2½-year-old Labor government. Lately they have become more acute with the intensification of American military pressures against the North.

On the military and troop-morale level the statements by the Johnson administration are understood by authorities here, who are not greenhorns in the arts of campaigning.

On the political level it's another story.

The private conversations of some senior government men suggest disenchantment with official Washington's aims and methods in Vietnam.

Among their arguments:

American officials have insisted repeatedly they have had no serious proposals for peace talks from Hanoi. Soviet officials including Premier Alexei N. Kosygin seemed to satisfy Wilson last month that serious peace talks were possible if Johnson ordered a military pause.

Johnson in early February said publicly "just almost any step" by Hanoi would be enough to bring about an American standoff against the North. Some British officials think he shiftedhis position by demanding later a reciprocal move by Hanoi such as halting shipments of arms and men southward.

The administration seems to some authorities here to be moving near to demanding total North Vietnamese surrender. The British doubt whether North Vietnam will surrender and Wilson has said publicly he is sure niether side can win the war.

All this can be seen as inevitable differences of emphasis between two partners, one of them losing lives and treasures daily on the battlefield.

That is why the British government, whatever it feels, would thinkg long and hard before publicly voicing doubts or criticism.

It also is why, formally and officially, the Wilson government intends to go on proclaiming its backing for the broad objectives which the Americans have defined in the Vietnam context.

The Britishpoint out that they have been more explicit in making their pro-American position known than any other member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

This attitude has added to the difficulties of the Wilson government on certain levels.

Wilson's support for Johnson has been a source of dispute inside the ruling Labor party, with middle-roaders as well as leftwingers questioning the wisdom and Socialist morality of his policy.

In Parliament, Labor misgivings over Vietnam have helped generate resentments over other political issues to a point that Wilson today leads a dangerously disunited party.

Slam Bid Is Big Problem

By Oswald & James Jacoby
Newspaper Enterprise Assn.

What would you do with the North hand after the bidding has gone one spade by East, two hearts by your partner and three spades by West?

You are pretty sure that your partner can make six hearts.

In fact you expect that he will make seven if a spade is opened. Your problem is to figure out how you can persuade the opponents to let him play the heart slam.

If you have a well-established reputation as a deceptive bidder you might jump right to six hearts. East will say to himself, "Good old North has jumped right to six hearts. If he thought his partner could make that contract, he would never make such an obvious bid. Therefore North is just bidding to get me up to six spades. I will double and show him he can't fool me."

If you haven't such a reputation this is a good hand to use to establish one. You simply bid four hearts. You might even pass but the trouble with that bid is that your opponents may not be playing forcing jump raises and the bidding might die at three spades.

What do you do with the East hand after North's four heart bid? You may decide to slow play the hand and just bid four spades or you may decide to try for a slam by the Blackwood route. When this hand was played at the Regency Whist Club in New York the East player used Blackwood. When West showed no aces, East signed off at five spades.

Needless to say, North went to six hearts and East doubled, never suspecting that he had fallen into a trap. Of course, he learned about the trap when he saw dummy, but it was too late then.

OUT OUR WAY — By J. R. WILLIAMS

STUBBORN OLD SHIP, the destroyer escort George A. Johnson, is being dismantled on the beach near Pacifica, Calif., where it stranded itself last October. Commissioned in 1944, it was being towed to Long Beach to be scrapped when it snapped its towline and drifted to shore. Salvagers decided to dismantle the ship on the spot, where they must deal with powerful breakers and shifting tides.

Changes In Vorster

New Prime Minister Has More Human Outlook Now

By ROBERT N. LINDSAY

JO ANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — When he became prime minister six months ago much of South Africa and the world knew Balthazar J. Vorster as top cop in a country where blacks outnumber whites 4-1.

He had been justice minister, and cartoonists depicted him as a hard-faced, iron-willed front for the slain Hendrik Verwoerd. He was the architect of security laws, head of the secret police and keeper of the peace when apartheid (race segregation) provoked violence.

Vorster set out to change the image.

He made his speeches conciliatory. He worked on establishing cordial relationships with the press. He was often photographed in baggy shorts and a floppy hat on the golf course.

His 21-year-old daughter, Elsa, became dad's unofficial public relations officer. She told newsmen how the new prime minister's domestic servants often had been criminals on parole.

"The picture the world has of my father is quite, quite different from the picture we have of him at home," she said.

Today Vorster's friends and political observers find him more flexible, more human, than Verwoerd. They consider he is readier to listen to advice from his cabinet colleagues, businessmen and economists.

Verwoerd was the mastermind at the head of affairs, a man whose word must not be challenged. He produced the blueprints for separate development of major race groups.

Vorster has the problem of making the whole thing work in a largely hostile world.

His reasoning is roughly: the apartheid philosophy is not that blacks are inferior to white, but that they are different and therefore they should live, work and have their beings separately.

"I sincerely believe what we are doing in South Africa is the right thing," he says.

He believes, too, that South Africa, increasingly under international fire, must be strong. His government aims at a draft of all males 17-25. This will mean nearly doubling the size of the armed forces, already among Africa's largest and best trained and equipped.

President Charles Swart explained the military expansion as an act "to deter aggression and maintain peace and stability at the southern end of a continent in constant turmoil."

The Johannesburg Rand Daily Mail, a critic of the government, said it really means South Africa is serving notice on the United Nations and everyone else in the West that this country could be tough to tackle if ever it came to a showdown.

Most whites apparently agree with Vorster's moves to give South Africa what he considers her "rightful place in Africa." He backs Verwoerd's vision of a loose confederation of white and black states and of a sort of Common Market in Southern Africa.

Vorster's supporters say he genuinely wants to improve relations with black Africa in a man-to-man basis. He has not so far produced a working plan that would overcome all the obstacles inherent in apartheid. How would black diplomats, accustomed to racial freedom in their own countries, be accommodated in South Africa? Would they be expected to live in nonwhite areas and to use transportation, restaurants, and other segregated services reserved for nonwhites?

Vorster hasn't said.

He was disappointed that a major project to make friends and influence Americans misfired when the U.S. aircraft carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt called at Cape Town, but outwardly at least he handled things calmly.

The official U.S. stand was that the carrier's shore leave was canceled because Washington did not wish the racially mixed crew to be subjected ashore to possible indignities. The South African attitudewas that a warm-hearted welcome had been prepared for men back from combat duty off Vietnam, that incidents stemming from apartheid were unlikely and that many other white and nonwhite sailors from other countries had managed in Cape Town by "doing in Rome what the Romans do."

Even antigovernment newspapers spoke of Vorster's "mild and conciliatory" attitude. They felt he had left to Washington the initiative for defining the pattern of future U.S.- South African relations.

Vorster is following the Verwoerd line on two other international issues likely to affect South Africa — Rhodesia and South-West Africa. He declines to participate in sanctions aimed at toppling Ian Smith's Rhodesian regime and supports continuance of what Verwoerd called "normal" trade with the northern neighbor.

He refuses to accept the U.N. decision that South Africa's mandate over South-West Africa must end with the territory's independence. South Africa has administered the territory as part of this country.

From that stand he is unlikely to budge but international repercussions from either the Rhodesian or South-West African problems are known to concern Vorster. Observers say he fears external pressures might create internal tensions which could upset his plans for "white unity through tranquility."

4-H Outdoorsman Project

The county-wide 4-H Outdoorsman project, which was formed in late February has created quite a lot of interest among several young people. There were 48 attending the last week's session.

Two phases are being covered this year. The first two meetings were conducted by Chester Vermaas, County Conservation Agent, on gun safety. One more meeting to be held on Saturday will be conducted so that the boys and girls will have an opportunity to fire the rifle.

The last four meetings are on the subject of first aid. Bill Cramer, an American Red Cross instructor, is teaching these sessions.

Mr. Eldon O'Neill and Tommy Grimes are the organizational leaders. According to Mr. O'Neill, the meetings have been very educational and interesting, causing the boys and girls to ask a lot of questions.

Championship Win In Lions Tourney To Local S and M

Kansas City Raiders Get Third Place Crown

S and M Sporting Goods downed the Columbia Staggs in hard fought game, 96-87 for the championship of the annual Lions Club Tournament.

Columbia Staggs jumped out to an early lead, 23-20, as Sedalia got into foul trouble in the first period, as one of their top men, Bud Valino, had three fouls at the end of the period. The second period was a fairly even battle as the the score ended 24-22 for the period with Columbia holding the slight edge at the half, 47-42.

The third period S and M got a tremendous effort from Central Missouri State College former cage star, Cozel Walker, who time after time blocked the shots of many of the Columbia shooters. S and M was able, for the first time, to capture the lead, at the end of the period, 68-64. The final period Walker stole the show as he almost single handedly preserved the victory for S and M, with his clutch shooting and fancy dribbling which kept the Staggs from regaining the lead.

Walker was the high scorer for the game with 35 points. High for Columbia was Lynn with 25. Lynn was the high scorer for the tournament with 101 points.

Boston College To Victory In NCAA Regional

KINGSTON, R.I. (AP)—Boston College, the nation's ninth ranked basketball power, cracked Connecticut's slow down tactics on the sharpshooting of Steve Adelman in the second half and charged to a 48-42 victory Saturday night in an opening round game of the NCAA regional tournament.

The Eagles broke away from a 14-13 halftime edge as Adelman struck for seven straight points, forcing Connecticut to loosen up on offense.

BC then opened up a lead of as much as 13 points, 35-22, before the Yankee Conference champions rallied briefly to close the gap in the final minutes.

Adelman, who scored only two points in the first half, finished with 16 in leading the Eagles into the Eastern Regionals against St. John's of New York next Friday at College Park, Md.

The Eagles, who had averaged 84 points in winning 19 of 21 regular season games, nailed down the triumph by hitting on 11 of 13 field goal attempts in the second half. They finished with 16 of 26 for the game.

Connecticut's Wes Bialosuknia, who entered the game as the nation's fifth leading scorer with an average of 28.6 points in the Huskies' 17-6 record, managed only 15, a victim of the stall.

Sports Scraps

By D. Kelly Scruton

TODAY some 35 or more sportswriters and sportscasters are to meet in St. Louis endeavoring to select three basketball squads to be recognized as "All-State" in Class L, Class M, and Class S. Consideration will be given to leading players on teams over the state. There are many hopefuls who may be disappointed. Then, on the other hand, there will be some who did not expect to make the team who may be chosen.

It is a chore which has taken considerable study by the men making the choices, and the results of the Saturday night State Class L Tournament could have a bearing on some of the selections. The appearance of a team in the state tournament does not necessarily mean the boys have to be selected on the All-State from teams who made it to the state tournament.

Many boys throughout the state have made a name for themselves with their team, in their conference and in many cases playing against other teams than in their own conference, but gained favorable recognition from their opponents.

Statistics will play a big part for a boy, but also the comparison of opposition he met—strong teams or a medium playing ball club.

The boys who are selected also must have been named to All-District teams to be eligible—the first step of elimination of many players. The district teams were screened thoroughly before the boys were selected to them. Many of the district teams have not been announced, in view of the fact sometimes this has an effect on the player and might upset his playing standards in the state tournament.

Before selections are made, the writers and casters will be informed as to who placed on district teams and from there starts the elimination and selection for the All-State.

It'll be a busy day in St. Louis for these men.

—o—

THIS next week will be almost Kansas City Chiefs week in Sedalia. The Chiefs have two appearances here with representatives. First it will be Duke Neff, promotion director for the football team, who is to speak to the Kiwanis Club on Thursday noon. Then Saturday the Chiefs basketball team plays the Smith-Cotton coaches and faculty in a game at the Smith-Cotton Gymnasium.

The Chiefs have gained much ground among Sedalia football fans the past year, and the demand on them has been something unusual. Already they have had players speak to the Sedalia Booster Club, an appearance at the Cablevision anniversary party at the Liberty Park, and numerous other requests are in.

The Kiwanis Club will get some "inside" information on the football team when Neff speaks to them. A question sure to be asked of him will be "What happened in California?" Knowing Neff, he'll have a "left-handed" answer which he hopes will be satisfactory if not bring a lot of good laughs.

Then Saturday night the Sedalia Lions Club benefit basketball game is to be played at the high school at which time some of the star football players will be in the short pants and shirts playing basketball — and I am told they are good at that game too.

A question has arisen about Neff. He's supposed to be managing the basketball team and I am wondering if he'll be playing with the team, too. This information should be available on Thursday. But regardless of whether he plays or not here are some of the Chiefs who will be playing: Ed Lothamer, Jim Tyrer, Big Buck Buchanan, Dave Hill, Fred Arbanas, Bobby Ply, Ed Budde, Art Merzer and Al Reynolds. They may pick up a couple more Chiefs to be used on the hardwood court.

The Lions will use the proceeds from the game in their children's activities and other worthwhile projects the club sponsors during the year.

Kansas Knocks Kansas State In Battle, 74-56

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — Big Eight champion Kansas, with Jo Jo White pumping and driving for 19 points, knocked out Kansas State with a 17-0 first half spurt and whipped the Wildcats 74-56 Saturday night.

Kansas, ranked No. 3 in the nation, heads into NCAA tourney play with a 22-3 record, 13-1 in league games. Kansas also ran its winning streak to 11. K-State finished 17-8 and fourth in the Big Eight at 9-5.

Kansas led only 13-12 midway in the first half and was having trouble with K-State's zone defense when the 17-0 spurt broke it open.

The work of Ron Franz and Vernon Vanoy on the offensive boards and White's steals and drives led the surge. Another spurt of 15-0 early in the last half shot the Kansas lead to 30 points, 60-30, before the Jayhawks' subs took over.

Ron Berkholtz led K-State with 16 points. Kansas has won six straight over the Wildcats in the series and the victory margin was the second widest in 21 years in the series.

Jim Ryun Steals Show

Kansas Dethroned For Team Title

DETROIT (AP) — Southern California's Trojans, paced by two of the day's five record-breakers, dethroned Kansas for the team title but the Jayhawkers' Jim Ryun stole the show with a 3:58.6 mile in the NCAA Indoor Track Meet Saturday.

Southern California took three firsts on the closing 10-event program of the two-day meet and wrapped up the title with 10 points in the closing pole vault.

In addition to Ryun, NCAA record makers were Southern California's Bob Seagren with a Earl McCullouch with a 7.0 hurdles; Ray Arrington of Wisconsin with 2:07.8 for the 1,000 yard run and Oklahoma's mile relay team with a 3:15.5 victory. as Nebraska's Charlie Greene won his third successive NCAA 60 dash title in 6.0 and high jumper Don Downing of Miami (Ohio) along with Missouri's Steve Herndon cleared 7-0. Downing won the title on the basis of fewer misses.

Southern California scored 26 points, while Oklahoma placed second with 17 and Kansas, the winner over the Trojans last year, 15-14, placed third.

Fourth was Villanova whose Dave Patrick Friday soundly trounced Ryun in the 880 with a world indoor mark of 1:48.9.

For both days a total of eight NCAA records were established and two were tied.

Providence To Victory In Tourney

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Walker's 37 point scoring spree led Providence to 77-68 first-round victory over meticulous Memphis State Saturday in the National Invitation Basketball Tournament.

Clutch shooting by Ron Nelson and Bill Morgan paced New Mexico to a 66-64 victory over Syracuse in the second game of the afternoon doubleheader at Madison Square Garden.

Tulsa met Marquette and Utah State played Rutgers in an evening twin bill.

Walker, the Friars' All-America backcourt ace and the country's leading scorer, poured in 23 points in the second half as Providence broke the game open in beginning its drive for a third NIT title. The Friars went all the way in 1961 and 1963.

A 20-foot jump shot midway in the second half gave the 6-foot-3 Walker 2,001 points for his varsity career.

Walker missed his first five shots as the Friars fell behind early in the first half, but he ran off six straight points for a 19-18 lead and Providence then moved to a 35-28 halftime lead.

Walker then scored 10 of the Friars' first 11 points after intermission and hit six more in a 10-0 burst that wrapped it up.

Mike Butler paced Memphis State with 24 points.

In the second game, Morgan and Nelson took up the slack after New Mexico's 6-foot-9 center Mel Daniels got into foul trouble midway in the second half of a fierce struggle.

Nelson, a 6-2 junior, hit 11 of his 15 points after intermission. Morgan had eight of the Lobos' last nine in the first half and 15 for the game, while Daniels scored 13 of 20 in the first half.

Rick Dean of Syracuse led all scorers with 21 points.

End Season By Upsetting Nebraska

BOULDER (AP) — Colorado closed out its 1967 basketball season by upsetting Nebraska's NIT-bound Cornhuskers 64-57 Saturday.

A crowd of 5,850 saw Colorado lead by a narrow margin throughout most of the second half and gain a second-place tie with the Huskers in the Big Eight standings.

The victory was Colorado's seventh straight at home this year and 13th over-all.

Colorado led at the half 37-35 and Nebraska never was able to get on top in the nationally televised contest.

The Huskers tied at 39-39 on Jim Damm's jump shot with 15:58 left. Bob Bauers' field goal from the outside boosted the Buffs ahead to stay.

Colorado built a 54-45 lead with 11:54 to go before Nebraska staged a counter-rally on baskets by Stuart Lantz and Tom Baack, two free throws by Ron Simmons and a field goal by Nate Branch to pull within one point at 54-53 with 8:03 to go.

After Pat Frink, the game's leading scorer with 21 points, and Baack traded baskets, Colorado went into a stalling game. Nebraska refused to press the Buffs and neither team scored until Bauers connected on two free throws with 3:12 left. Baack hit Nebraska's final points on a long shot to make it 58-57, but the Buffs padded their margin on free throws.

Nebraska hit 52.1 per cent from the field and Colorado 46.8.

Nebraska had the better of the rebounding 32-29.

Chief's Basketball Team To Play Smith-Cotton Faculty

Next Saturday night, March 18, the Sedalia Lions Club is sponsoring a benefit basketball game at the Smith-Cotton High School gymnasium which brings together the Kansas City Chiefs — football players now playing basketball — against the Smith-Cotton High School coaches and faculty all-stars. It will be a great evening of entertainment for basketball fans, and an opportunity to meet many of the Chiefs football players.

The Chiefs were off to a late start in their basketball playing this year due to being occupied for nearly six weeks additional football, having to play for the American Football League Championship which was followed by the Super Bowl.

Providing the big, strong background on which the team functions is All-League defensive tackle Buck Buchanan. The 6'6", 285-pound lad holds the team's individual scoring marks, including 48 points in one game and his average for their 1965 season was 22.3. He also topped the scorers last year with an 8.9 log.

Filling the roll as gunner on the Chiefs quintet is, surprisingly, Dave Hill. One doesn't expect a 6'6", 280-pound tackle to move as well as Dave. Last year he averaged 14.2.

Bobby Hunt, defensive halfback on the grid team, fills a much needed spot in the Chiefs overall team picture. He has missed some games because of previous commitments, but may be here for this contest.

A luxury the cage team has had previously is the newcomer Solomon Brannan, who decided to remain in Kansas City this winter and play basketball. His quickness at guard has been very helpful this year. Other squad members, well known to the football fans, are: Fred Arbanas, Bobby Ply, Ed Budde, Bud Abell, Jerrel Wilson, Jim Tyrer, Art Merzer, Ed Lothamer and Al Reynolds.

The game should prove to be very very interesting to the basketball fans, while the football fans can be on hand to see their favorite Chief in action on the court and after the game to get their autographs.

Making the evening more entertaining the "Fats" and the "Thins" basketball teams of the Sedalia Lions Club will play a preliminary game. They will have as part of their uniform some of the costumes worn in past Fashion Shows. Vice-President Addison "Ad" Taylor has been elected the captain of the "Fats" team.

The Lions Club has tickets on sale and are hopeful they will be able to sell the allotted 1,800 tickets. "When they are gone—that's it," Co-Chairmen Gene Gregory and Russell Rhodes reported.

Tickets can be obtained at the Cash Hardware stores, downtown and State Fair Shopping Center; Tempo, at Thompson Hills Shopping Center; Broadway Lanes; Chapman's; Mullin's Men's Wear; Homakers; Union Savings Bank; both Bing's supermarkets; Hurtt Pharmacy; and the Chamber of Commerce.

VERSATILE PLAYER — Fred Arbanas has proved he can play basketball almost as well as his regular job of playing football for the Kansas City Chiefs. Local fans will get a chance to see Arbanas in action next Saturday night in a game here.

Golf, Tennis Squads Are Taking Shape

The Smith-Cotton varsity golf and tennis teams have started preparation for their loaded schedule. Coach Foster McGuire's squads will be playing a full conference schedule for the first time.

The golf team seems to have the most returning lettermen of the two squads, with five golfers back from last year's squad. The top S-C golfer from last year, Mike DeLozier, is back along with George Dugan, Dick Postels, Rusty Johnson and Keith Yount. These lettermen and the other candidates will be trying for both an A and B team berth. The varsity squad has five positions open for conference action in medal play. First game for the golfers will be a varsity meet with Jefferson City Helias in Jefferson City, March 22.

The tennis squad has only two returning lettermen this year, but four players returning overall. The top three positions were lost through graduation and these four, along with the other candidates, will be trying to fill those three positions plus the doubles team for conference action. Bill Maunders and David Schmidle, number four and five last year, are the two returning lettermen, and Terry Winebrenner and Glenn Wissman are the two returners who did not letter last year. The tennis team, like the golf squad, will be playing a full conference schedule this year for the first time. The first meet for the tennis squad will be with Clinton, March 28. The conference schedule starts a week later on April 3 with Hannibal on the Liberty Park courts in Sedalia.

New Mentor Sees Davis Cup Victory

NEW YORK (AP) — "If we get any kind of a break, we can win the Davis Cup this year," Robert Kelleher, new president of the U. S. Lawn Tennis Association, said Saturday in announcing that George MacCall would captain the American team for the third straight year.

Kelleher called MacCall, Los Angeles insurance executive, "one heck of a guy in whom I have supreme confidence."

"We have a good captain and a good team," the USLTA president said. "Whether we can go all the way is in the laps of the gods but I think we are capable of beating any team in the world."

With Roy Amerson considering semi-retirement and Fred Stolle already a pro, the Australians, perennial holders of the cup, like the United States will be building a new team.

Kelleher said MacCall already has assembled his squad and has begun pointing to the long summer campaign, which starts with a Davis Cup match against the British Caribbean in Trinidad April 28-30.

"All of our early matches will be played on red clay," Kelleher said. "MacCall is preparing the team to be ready for all kinds of surfaces and conditions."

With top-ranked Dennis Ralston now a pro and Arthur Ashe of Richmond, Va., in the Army, the United States must build its hopes around Clark Graebner, Charlie Pasarell, Marty Riessen and Cliff Richey.

Graebner, a Northwestern University graduate, may prove the dark-horse of the lot. He was playing the best tennis of any American amateur when he was suspended by MacCall during the U.S. Nationals, apparently for insubordination.

Pasarell, a 23-year-old Puerto Rican who recently won the National indoor crown for the second straight time, has tremendous potential but has been inclined to mental lapses.

Riessen, 25, from Hinsdale, Ill., is an outstanding doubles player. Cliff Richey, 20, from San Angelo, Tex., is the team's best clay court player.

Thomas' Leadoff Hit In Ninth Breaks Tie

BRADENTON, Fla. (AP) — Boston's George Thomas hit a lead-off homer in the ninth inning that broke a 4-4 tie Saturday and Don Demeter singled in another run as the Red Sox scored a 6-5 exhibition victory over Kansas City.

Joe Rudi doubled in two runs for the A's in the first.

The Red Sox tied the score in the second and went ahead 4-2 in the third on run-scoring singles by Carl Yastrzemski and Tony Horton.

The Athletics pulled even in the fourth, scoring one run on a throwing error by pitcher Gary Waslewski and another on a single by John Donaldson.

Rough Wrestling Card Is Set For Tuesday Night

One of the season's roughest wrestling cards is scheduled at Convention Hall Tuesday night when both heavyweights and girl grapplers go through their bruising paces.

Assuring a hard-fought, fast-paced main event is a six-wrestler tag team clash. Three of the area's roughest battlers —Guillotine Gordon, plus the masked Pear and Plum — will make up on tandem.

The other will see Sonny Myers, Lee Henning and Victor Rivera pooling talents.

That event alone should produce some wild, free-swinging action. Further assuring the season's roughest pace is the scheduling of a rematch between Jean Antone and Betty Niccoli, longtime rivals and both strong, rugged ring veterans.

The rules will be wide open for their clash. Seats will be moved back ten feet from ringside and falls scored will count whether posted inside the ropes or outside them. For the novel event, tow referees will be used.

Myers will take on Gordon in a separate heavyweight scrap, while Rivera will test the Plum.

Alliance of the masked Plum and Pear with Gordon marks the beginning of what could become one of the strongest wrestling triumvirates in the Midlands. All have good power, a fair amount of speed and each is well grounded in the roughing phase of the action.

Henning, Myers and Rivera also have several qualities in their favor. Myers is a master of the sleeper, Henning has heft and experience and Rivera is regarded as one of the fastest among area heavyweights.

Bruins Race To Perfect Season Mark

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The UCLA Bruins, sparked by Lew Alcindor's 26 points, raced to a perfect regular season record by crushing the Southern California Trojans, 83-55, Saturday afternoon in Pacific - 8 Conference basketball.

In gaining their 26th win of the year, the Bruins became the sixth team in major college history to post a perfect mark for the regular season.

Alcindor, the 7-foot-1⅜ sophomore from New York, was, as usual, the dominant force for the potent Bruins, but was given and Bill Sweek. The pair continually harassed the Trojans with spectively.

For the Trojans, who lost their fourth game of the year to the Bruins, high point honors went to Steve Jennings with 14 and Bill Hewitt with 11.

Southern California, playing a zone defense and, predictably, a stall offense, trailed only 14-11 after 11:50 of the first half. But then the Bruins' full-court press and aggressive play took charge.

UCLA forced USC into sloppy and over-eager passing, while Alcindor and Sweek led a 15-point splurge as the Trojans were blanked.

The Bruins carried a 37-20 lead into the second half and continued to pour it on the hapless Trojans with a 25-5 scoring binge in the first seven minutes. Sweek breaking up the Trojans' offense, while Alcindor and Lynn Shackelford did the bulk of the scoring for the Bruins.

UCLA Coach John Wooden removed his starting five with 5:03 remaining in the game, as the Bruins held a 74-48 advantage.

Fight World Braces For Ban Tirade

NEW YORK (AP) — The fight world braced itself for another ban boxing tirade Saturday after a bloody riot at Madison Square Garden that injured more than a dozen spectators and sent five to the hospital.

The violence followed a unanimous 12-round decision for Panama's Ismael (Tiger) Laguna over Frankie Narvaez, a ring idol of the Puerto Ricans.

None of the injuries were serious. But boxing people headed for the cyclone cellars. They could see a new campaign to outlaw the sport coming.

"It happens every time," said Harry Markson, executive director of the Madison Square Garden Boxing Club. "The do-gooders use a situation like this to get in the public eye. The anti boxing crowd is grinding its axes —You can bet on that.

"Actually, the disturbance lasted no more than five minutes. We were well prepared for it. I'd say no more than 20 people set it off. But what can you do when a guy stands up and cuts loose with a beer bottle?"

This was the second such riot in the Garden's long history. The other occurred on Aug. 4, 1965 and also involved Narvaez, beaten then by Filipino Flash about 25 minutes and the injuries were both slight and few.

"There seems to be just a core of Narvaez supporters who trigger this thing," Markson said. "It really is going to hurt the guy, who is a fine fighter.

"I know we will have to think long and hard before bringing Narvaez back into the Garden."

Markson said he wasn't concerned about security measures for the Garden's next big fight — the heavyweight title bout March 22 between champion Cassius Clay and Zora Folley.

"We always take adequate precautions," the Garden official said. "We have found that it only happens with a few hot heads who get excited about this one guy."

Lincoln And Cole Camp Take Honors

Lincoln won the LaMonte Elementary Basketball Tournament Friday night as they defeated the host team, LaMonte, 34-22. In the contest for third place, Warsaw defeated Smithton, 41-33.

The championship game was a low scoring affair with LaMonte grabbing the lead at the end of the first quarter, 8-5. In the second period both teams matched each other point for point, with LaMonte still holding a three-point lead. The third quarter Lincoln cut into LaMonte's lead, as they scored five points to LaMonte's four. The fourth quarter Lincoln nets for 19 points, while applying an iron tight defense which held LaMonte to just four.

Beatty was the high scorer for the game, with 13 points for Lincoln. High scorer for LaMonte was Jones with 11 points.

In the contest for third place in the tournament, Warsaw jumped off to a first quarter lead 11-5, but Smithton came battling back in the second quarter to cut into Warsaw's lead, outscoring them 13-10, but still trailing at the half, 21-18. Both teams came out in the third quarter, all fired up, which resulted in the quarter being fought to stand still with each team scoring 11 points. The fourth period Warsaw's defense took over and held Smithton to just four points, while the offense tallied nine points.

McCutcheon of Smithton, the high scorer of the game with 18 points. Jones had 11 points for LaMonte.

Cole Camp won the volleyball tournament as they turned back Sacred Heart, by the overwhelming score of 52-19. Tied for scoring honors for Cole Camp were Morarity and Crenshaw each with ten points. Heer and Eckhoff had five points for Sacred Heart.

LaMonte captured third place in the tournament with a 37-27 victory over Warsaw. High scorers for LaMonte was Jnott with ten points. Hunt had six for Warsaw.

Score by quarters:

LinColn	5	6	5	19—34

Two Men Convicted On Robbery Charges

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Two young men arrested soon after the $29,168 holdup of the Livestock National Bank here last Oct. 26 were convicted on robbery charges Saturday by a federal court jury.

One of them, Raymond Lee Payton, 18, was arrested a few minutes after the bank robbery. His car stalled in the 80-mile-an hour police chase through downtown Kansas City. Police said $1,020 of the loot was found in his car.

The other youth, James Luther Scott, 19, was taken into custody the following day.

The bandits entered the bank shortly after opening. While one stayed near the entrance, the other vaulted the counter at the first teller window and emptied the cash drawer into a pillow case. After cleaning out drawer at two other cages, he warned against pushing alarm buttons, vaulted back over the counter and ran out with the man at the door.

Grant Hired To Coach Minnesota

ST. PAUL - MINNEAPOLIS (AP)—The Minnesota Vikings, always exciting but a challenger for the National Football League championship only once in their six-year history, hired Harry P. (Bud) Grant Saturday in the hope that he can get them "over the hump."

Grant, 39-year-old one - time University of Minnesota three-sport star who has coached the Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Canadian Football League the past 10 years, replaces Norm Van Brocklin who resigned a month ago.

It was Van Brocklin, only head coach the Vikings have had since they entered the NFL in 1961, who admitted his inability to get Minnesota "over the their peak in 1964 when they tied Green Bay for second in the Western Conference.

Van Brocklin quit in a state of depression in November 1965, but that resignation lasted only 24 hours. Van Brocklin resigned again Feb. 11 after quarterback Fran Tarkenton quit the team. The Vikings made no effort to talk Van Brocklin out of it this time.

Instead, they turned to Grant, who had turned the Vikings' job down in 1961 before Van Brocklin was hired.

A ramrod - straight, athletic figure whose greying crew-cut hair belies his boyish look, Grant maintains the 6-foot-3, he carried when he was a football, basketball and baseball star at Minnesota in the late 1940s.

Grant brings to the Viking job a successful record in the Canadian League. His teams won four Grey Cup championships in six title games, and showed a 121-66-3 over-all record for his 10 years in Winnipeg, the last three as general manager as well as coach.

He offered no startling plan for revitalizing the Vikings when his selection as the new Minnesota coach was made official at a news conference Saturday.

"I know the Vikings have the nucleus of a fine football team," Grant said. "I know we can be a contender in a short time. The Vikings have gone through the growing stage in the NFL and are ready to be a contender from here on in.

Grant signed a three-year contract believed to call for about $50,000 a year, which would represent an increase of about $10,000 over his estimated Winnipeg salary.

Satchmo In Mood to Cool It for Awhile

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Louis (Satchmo) Armstrong, still blowing strong at 66, is here on a three-week engagement with a wistful wish.

"I wouldn't abruptly retire. But I would like to cool it and take a year or so out. Make a world tour without the horn, say hello to all my fans and really see the places I've been."

Lucille, his wife of 25 years, added: "We've bee n over the Grand Canyon several times. We'd like to put our feet on the ground there sometime."

But Louie is booked up at least through the rest of this year — Halifax, Nova Scotia, next, then Montreal, several U.S. universities, New York, Vancouver, England, Ireland, France, etc.

The man with the golden trumpet, piano-keyboard grin and gravelly tremolo was packing in the cats at the Ambassador Hotel's Cocoanut Grove. He and his troupe, the All Stars, sell happiness as well as music.

Days he sleeps, which means he sees little of the places he visits.

"You gotta take care of yourself," he growled in the sawmill voice made scratchy by a 54-year singing career. He annoints his trumpet-scarred lips with a salve made by a German manufacturer, with Armstrong's name on the label.

What keeps him going?

"It's something you just can't say 'the hell with it,'" said Satch. "Your public won't understand."

Just out of the shower, he sat in his Ambassador suite in a yllow robe and leather-thong slippers, a white handkerchief tied over his head against drafts.

"Those handkerchiefs are a part of Louie," said Lucille. She estimated he takes 500-700 on tour, mopping his brow and holding the trumpet with them. Fans swipe some. He has stacks of them around the house back home in Queens, Long Island.

For a boy who learned the cornet in a New Orleans orphanage and delivered coal for 15 cents a load while playing nights in honky-tonks, the living legend of jazz has come a long way.

There were crowds up to 97,000 in Budapest last year, 100,000 in Ghana in 1956. In Leopoldville, Congo warriors stopped fighting five days to 'Satch-E-mo,'" Louie grinned.

He played for Presidents Johnson and John F. Kennedy.

Had he any thoughts on rock 'n' roll? "It's the essence of jazz."

Civil rights? "I make donations for the cause and play benefits for the NAACP."

Adam Clayton Powell? "All I know about the Rev. Powell is in his church days. I don't know anything about politics."

Protect Historic Boston Back Bay Area

BOSTON (AP)—The historic atmosphere of Boston's Back Bay area will be protected by a special architectural commission, says Mayor John F. Collins.

He said the five-man commission would have the power to approve all construction and exterior design changes to help bring "a harmonious blend of old and new."

Common Cold Has Some Uncommon Expense Tags

By HAL BOYLE

NEW YORK (AP)—Things a columnist might never know if he didn't open his mail:

The common cold is uncommonly expensive. Its annual cost in the United States exceeds $5 billion and if you don't get two or three colds a year you're luckier than your neighbor.

Waging wars seems to be habit — forming in the human race. It is estimated that since the dawn of recorded history the world has been at peace only eight per cent of the time.

One reason the Arabian camel can go so long without water is that when he does take a drink he takes a mighty big one. He can gulp down 15 gallons at a time.

The outlook for coronary patients is improving. Statistics show that 70 per cent of heart attack victims survive at least five years and better than 50 pe cent survive 10 years or longer if they take proper care of themselves.

Motherhood is also safer. Only one in a thousand live births results in a maternal death.

Quotable notables: "There is no insanity so devastating in man's life as utter sanity." — William Allen White.

Women are more religious th men. A poll by Catholic Digest magazine showed that 77 per cent of women, but only 63 per cent of the men interviewed, said that faith in a divine being was important in their lives.

Contrary to the opinion of some authors, books don't have to be sexy to make the best-seller list. Perhaps the largest advance sale in the history of U.S. publishing—2,154,000 copies — was for a new Methodist hymn book.

If you separately ask a number of people to tell you quickly what day of the month it is, 6 ou of 10 women and 5 out of 10 men can't give you the right answer without consulting the calendar or looking at the date on their newspaper.

Reference Section Up-Dated At Library

The reference section of the Sedalia Public Library has been considerably up dated recently, with the addition of four new sets of encyclopedias. Latest additions are two sets of the 1967 World Book Encyclopedia. The library now has the newest editions of World Book, Collier's and Our Wonderful World encyclopedias. A new set of Encyclopedia Americana has been ordered.

In addition to the new encyclopedias, the best-selling Random House Dictionary of the English language and many other helpful reference works have been acquired. The library is endeavoring to up-date and enlarge its reference section so that students may be able to conduct their research rapidly and effectively.

Hum Replaces Argument In Need for Lift In Economy

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — The smoothness that seems to be developing between fiscal and monetary policy will become, in itself, a restorative to confidence in the future of the economy.

Whereas the administration and the Federal Rserve, the controllers of fiscal and monetary policy, were arguing a year ago, they are now humming the same tune. Both feel the economy needs a lift.

This past week the Fed continued to make credit easier to obtain by opening the spigot it controls and allowing more money to flow to the nation's banks.

The administration proposed making it easier for business to spend for new plants and equipment by asking Congress to reinstate a 7 per cent tax credit.

As a result, the feeling is developing that the economy is being more soundly managed, if only because the Fed and the administration seem to be seeing eye to eye once more.

Pushing in different directions as they were for a while last year — the administration accelerating and the Fed braking — they almost stripped the economic gears. The economic machinery screamed before order was restored.

This present harmony then is no coincidence, for neither the Fed nor the administration relished last year's battle, in which there were no winners and many losers: the Fed, the administration, the economy, the nation's stability.

A year ago the Fed was tightening the credit spigot slowly and forcing up interest rates. By late summer only a trickle of funds were flowing to a parched economy. A credit desert had been created.

Naturally this caused a slowing of economic activity. In the Fed's view this was necessary because the nation was attempting to buy more than it could produce. Such an overheated situation results in inflation.

The administration did not at first see it that way. It seemed to feel the economy was rolling on the high road to the Great Society and that higher interest rates were an intolerable roadblock. So also would be a tax increase.

Gradually, however, the red lights and the clamor of overheating became too obvious to ignore and the administration also braked. It speeded up tax payments. It promised to delay some federal spending. It suspended the tax credit.

The tax credit has been designed to make i tmore profitable for companies to expand their productive capacity by permitting them to deduct from their income taxes 7 per cent of the cost of added plants or equipment.

Some businessmen, especially those in the steel industry and other industry in which huge amounts are spent on plants, felt bitter about this move. They conceded it would cut spending, but the wrong kind of spending.

They argued unsuccessfully that plant expansion was deflationary — not inflationary. By making plants more efficient, they said, we will be able to produce more economically. This argument was never really resolved.

Spending dropped, however, which was what the Fed said was needed — if not by the federal government itself then by the civilian sector.

Now, in spurring the economy once more, the administration finds itself in agreement with the Fed. The Fed, in fact, decided even earlier that its policy of tight credit should be eased to give the economy a lift.

The big question now concerns the proposed 6 per cent surcharge on most individual and corporate taxes, which, if passed, would take effect after midyear. Why didn't the administration also spike this plan?

The apparent reason is that to dispense with this proposal now would cause the administration to deny itself ammunition later. Perhaps by next July this high-flying economy will need another dose of slowdown. A surtax then might be just the thing.

Brain Drain Nags South Vietnamese

SAIGON (AP) — A brain drain of skilled Vietnamese who prefer to live elsewhere nags this nation.

Some have used American scholarships as one-way tickets to escape their war-racked country. Others have lived overseas — usually in France — for many years and apparently have little intention of returning.

Exit visas are not granted easily to average Vietnamese. Reports persist that the wealthy can usually obtain permits by paying large sums under the table.

France does not require an entry visa for Vietnamese nationals.

Officials say at least 12,600 Vietnamese nationals live there.

Hundreds of French scholarships were once given to Vietnamese each year. The Saigon government now bars them.

There are an estimated 1,100-1,200 Vietnamese physicians in this nation of 16 million. Some 700 are in the armed forces. Another 299 work for the health ministry and usually practice privately on the side.

At least 700 other Vietnamese doctors live and work in France.

Officials report that 3,299 Vietnamese traveled to the United States or other countries under American sponsorship from 1959 to June 1966.

These included Vietnamese who spent a few weeks at an American-backed rice research center in the Philippines and those who took years to earn undergraduate and graduate degrees at universities in the United States.

A chartered plane departed last month with 118 scholars, including 49 war veterans, who will study English for six months in California and enter schools and universities there in September.

A U.S. Agency for International Development (AID) statement said these full-expense scholarships are to prepare Vietnamese "to assume responsible positions upon completion of training and return to Vietnam."

Some blame for the brain drain has been placed on misuse of qualified persons who return. One case cited by Americans: a talented electrical engineer was put in charge of a warehouse.

At least 32 of those who studied in America between 1959 and 1966 moved on to France and 12 went to other countries instead of returning to Vietnam. Six others simply dropped from sight, nine married Americans and 11 wed Vietnamese living in the United States.

The United States is stepping up efforts to improve the educational system here to relieve the need to send students overseas.

United States support also is being funneled into the expansion of teacher training. Emphasis is placed on helping female teachers not subject to military service.

Meantime, 400-500 students will continue to be chosen each year for American-financed training abroad.

It's A Great Spring For New Fashions

It's a great spring for suits; it's a great spring for sheaths, skimmer shifts, two piece dresses; it's a great spring for coats, it's a great spring for sports clothes — yes, indeed, it is a great spring for fashions. For it will be a long spring with Easter just two weeks away.

With the first breath of spring stores blossom out with colors of the hyacinths and daffodils, and just as lovely. This is a season for femininity even to the flowered slack suits.

Skirt lengths are still short, from mid-knees to three inches above, with most women in Sedalia willing to settle for the mid-knee length even if they wear them above in New York.

Knits are leading the fashion parade, wools, acetate and linen, printed linens and cottons, those always ready pretty knits.

Suits are a spring favorite, all kinds of suits, two piece, three piece, the walking suit, suits of solid colors, checks, plaids, stripes; suits with three-quarter length sleeves, long sleeves and Kabuki sleeves. Suits with polka dot trim, stripe trim, with shells and blouses of all kinds from the frilly to the turtle neck.

Skirts are modified A line, pleated, straight, swinger, and jackets are of varying lengths and styles.

Coats are of nubby wool, boucle, smooth materials; straight, princess, semi-tent, classics with notched collars; belts, low belts and no belts; plaids, checks, solids; double breasted and single breasted; patch pockets, slash pockets; bracelet length sleeves, long sleeves. But most of all the accent is on buttons. Big buttons and little buttons, one coat buttons down the front with nine little glass buttons no larger than a dime. There are stand away collars and mandarin necklines.

The colors in suits and coats are mainly white, light beige and pastels in both light and deeper shades.

Dresses are in many colors, many materials, many styles, from the shifts to the full skirts, free and easy styles, cowl necklines, jewel necklines, scoop necklines, lace and buttons and bows. The materials are many from the wrinkle-free triacetate jersey, linen, knits, chiffons, cottons, easy-care fabrics that go from spring into summer, fashioned with from no sleeves to long sleeves.

Gay sports wear for play or gardening, easy to wear, attractive for all fun activities, for gardening is fun, too.

And then for the romantic evenings, the proms, the formal dances, beautiful floor length formals, many with high rising waists, flowing chiffons, lace, silk organza, linens, with trim of many kinds including pastel shaded ostrich feathers around the hemline.

Yes, indeed, it is a great spring for new and delightful fashions.

DOTS AND BOWS—A splash of red and white polka dots and a saucy bow gives this little frock an irrestiable appeal to young juniors. In easy care and cool as a whisper voil, Miss Julie Seelen, left, has the perfect dress for Easter and sunny days of spring. The big plus for spring is the tent dress, and this is a modified version in navy knit worn by Mrs. Delia Nix, center. Long sleeved, easy fitting, and smartly collared and cuffed in white, this dress with a quick change of accessories, may be worn through the season for almost any occasion. Style is the key word for this creation Mrs. Wilma Davis, right, is wearing and is proof that this pink confection of dacron and silk is certain to be a favorite. With classic lines and a slightly cowled neck, this little basic will easily travel to a ball game or to a dinner. These attractive clothes are from the Mall Dress Shoppe, Thompson Hills. New Book On Kennedy Activity

NEW YORK (AP) — In the three months before his assassination, President John F. Kennedy showed a cautious but favorable response to overtures by Prime Minister Fidel Castro of Cuba for a resumption of diplomatic relations, a new book says.

Details of preliminary confidential diplomatic talks are given in the book, "The Reds and the Blacks," to be published Thursday by Harper & Row.

The author of the book is William Attwood, who in the fall of 1963 served on the U.S. delegation to the United Nations. Before that Attwood was President Kennedy's ambassador to Guin and subsequently he was appointed by President Johnson as ambassador to Kenya.

Attwood is now editor in chief of Look magazine.

An aide to Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D. N.Y., said Thursday night that the senator was acquainted with the book and considered it to be "essentially accurate."

The overtures by Castro were said to have begun in September 1963.

Attwood says he had received hints from other sources that Castro was growing restive under Communist pressures and was prepared to make "substantial concessions" to achieve an accommodation with the United States.

Attwood says he suggested to Adlai E. Stevenson, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, and to W. Averell Harriman of the State Department that quiet contact be made with a Cuban delegation to the United Nations to find out "if in fact Castro did want to talk on our terms."

Harriman favored the idea but advised Attwood to explore it with Robert Kennedy "because of its political implications." Meanwhile, the book relates, Stevenson discussed the matter with President Kennedy.

President Kennedy approved the notion of Attwood conferring with Dr. Carlos Lechuga, the chief Cuban delegate, "so long as I made it clear we were not soliciting discussions." Attwood.

Attwood writes that he informed McGeorge Bundy, a presidential assistant, of what Lechuga had told him.

"I informed Bundy and later was told that the Cuban exercise would probably be put on ice for a while — which it was and where it has been ever since," Attwood writes.

Hospitals To Receive Big Gifts

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — The Missouri Hospital Advisory Council has announced tentative allocation of almost $6 million from federal Hill-Burton funds.

The money would go to 16 hospitals and nursing home projects.

General hospitals would get $2,839,957, including:

Scotland County Hospital, Memphis—$303,000; Salem Hospital, Salem—$560,000; St. Clair County Hospital, Osceola—$320,000; St. Francis Hospital, Maryville — $1 million; and Pike County Memorial Hospital, Louisiana—$656,057.

Nursing home projects received the following allocations totaling $1,410,360:

Scotland County Nursing Home, Memphis—$169,000; Putnam County Nursing Home, Unionville — $134,522; Perry County Nursing Home, Perryville — $275,583; Golden Age Nursing Home, Braymer—$161,920; Smithville Hospital, Springfield—$326,335.

Three separate allocations went to Childrens Mercy Hospital of Kansas City. The grants, totaling $1,330,511, were made to replace obsolete facilities, for a rehabilitation project and for construction of a diagnostic and treatment facility.

Two hospitals in St. Louis also received allocations for diagnostic and treatment projects. They are Deaconess Hospital—$120,470 and St. Louis County Hospital—$99,167.

College Students Want Disney Monument

KANSAS CITY (AP) — About 150 college students staged a march on City Hall Thursday to urge Kansas City to raise some sort of monument in memory of Walt Disney.

Disney, famed cartoonist and movie producer who died recently, spent his early years in Kansas City.

The students from Donnelly College in Kansas City, Kan., were escorted by nine policemen. They met with D. Peter Newquist, executive secretary to Mayor Ilus Davis, who was out of the city.

Newquist told the group that in time city leaders would discuss the possibility of naming a monument or city building after Disney. The students suggested naming Mid-Continent International Airport in honor of Disney.

Loch Ness Monster Puzzle

INVERNESS, Scotland (AP) — Yes, Virginia, there is a Loch Ness monster. At least, that's what the experts say.

The only trouble is, Virginia, that even the experts can't make up their minds about just what creature they're dealing with. It may be a cephatspod. (That's an Octopus or Squid.) It may be a gastropod. That's a giant sea slug. Roy Mackal, associate professor of biochemistry at Chicago University, who has put in many hours watching the lake, inclines to the view that the Loch Ness monster is really an invertebrate transitional between the two.

The man who says he has seen the monster more than anyone else is Clem Lister Skelton, resident technician of the Loch Ness Phenomena Investigation Bureau Ltd., a body of scientists and volunteer watchers who try to identify the thing and plot its behavior patterns.

Skelton claims eight sightings - the latest in January.

Skelton himself has a bad case of monster fever. His dark blue tie is embroidered in silver with the many-humped beastie.

"She's my Moby Dick," he says with an apologetic smile. "But the chances of sighting her are not very good. We've averaged a sighting for every 350 man-hours of watching over the past five years. Of course, we're not sure if we always see the same one."

Skelton thinks there may be a breeding herd of as many as 20 or 30 of whatever-they-are in Loch Ness.

"We have one of the largest creatures in the world in this loch's confines and we don't know what it is," he says. "It's challenging. It's exciting. And it's infuriating."

David James of Torsay Castle, a former Conservative member of Parliament, who organized the Phenomena In - vestigation Bureau in 1962, puts it another way:

"It's like trying to get a photograph of some rare bird. All you can do is set up a good hide in a sensible place — and wait and wait and wait."

Some bureau members think it may take as long as 10 years to crack the mystery of Loch Ness. The project has cost $50,000 to date and is running at about $10,000 a year.

Funds come from membership fees and gifts. You can be a life member of the Loch Ness Phenomena Investigation Bureau for $300 or a subscribing member for $15 a year. Either way you get a tie like Skelton's with the monster emblem.

The Chicago Adventurers contributed $5,000 last year after David James had visited their club. At least eight adventurers came to Loch Ness to see how their money was being spent.

They found teams of eight drawn from the bureau's 100 volunteers at its summer camp at Achnahannet, two miles south of Urquhart Castle. That's where the lake is deepest — 758 feet — at a point 200 yards offshore. It's monster country.

The watchers, working in relays from mid-May to mid-October, are equipped with log pads, field glasses and movie cameras with telephoto lenses. Big stereoscopic aerial survey cameras with 20-inch and 36-inch lenses are synchronized to operate six feet apart.

What the cameras get on film is sent for interpretation to the Defense Ministry's Joint Air Reconnaissance Center, the outfit which successfully pinpointed Hitler's secret weapon, the V2 rocket, from pictures taken over Pennemunde in 1943.

After JARIC had once reported identifying "two animate objects weighing about one and a half tons each," Lord Shackleton, then Air Force minister and a disbeliever in monsters, confessed: "I find it very hard to discount the findings of the JARIC reports."

People weren't always sceptical about what lived in Loch Ness. St. Columba, abbot of Iona, who made the first recorded sighting in 565 A.D., rebuked the monster for attacking one of his followers. "The holy man gave a great shout and commanded the beast to go back into the depths from which he came," the chronicler reported. The monster obligingly did so.

In 1527 one Duncan Campbell told of a far more frightening experience. "A terrible beast," he said, climbed out of the water and killed three men on shore with the slash of its tail.

Sightings became frequent in the early 18th century when Gen. George Wade was building the first paved road on the lake shore as part of government policy to pacify the warring highland clans.

In the 1930s road construction workers reported strange movements in the lake. Alex Campbell, the Fort Augustus water bailiff, called whatever-it-was the Loch Ness monster — and the name stuck. What had long been a local legend became an international one. But some people wondered, as they do today, if it really was a legend after all.

The theory in the 1930s was that shock waves from blasting rock along the lake shore penetrated deep beneath the water and caused the monster to surface.

Commercial interests showed interest. Comic postcards featuring the monster became a feature of the tourist trade in Inverness, as they still are. The monster appeared stamped into Scottish shortbread. Inverness Unionist Association adopted it as mascot.

Highlanders don't deny that the monster helps the summer tourist trade, but they angrily deny that they invented it.

Those who have seen the monster never joke about it. Take Mr. R. R. MacEwen. A respected Inverness attorney, he is not at all the kind of man to go around seeing what isn't there. He gave this description of the dark-colored object he saw moving on the lake:

"I saw a big commotion in the water, then a thing like a rather thick periscope appeared and moved along from right to left, accompanied by a great disturbance about the periscope and behind it." There are no submarines in Loch Ness.

People who genuinely think they have seen the monster are asked to report immediately to the investigation bureau's lakeside camp. The detailed form they are asked to fill out is based on that used by the Linnean Society of Boston in 1817 in response to repeated sea serpent sightings off the Massachusetts coast. It poses 44 questions.

Expert watchers have classified the results obtained so far as 30 per cent probable, 20 per cent good sightings, 50 per cent "other phenomena."

Usually a small head, a long neck, a massive hump is all that is seen above surface. But that's enough for most amateur observers!

The monsters are believed to live now mainly on Loch Ness eels, which often grow to six feet in length. They may eat salmon and trout, too, but Skelton doubts that. There are just too many fish in the lake.

So why, with all the aids of modern science is it so difficult to identify and examine the thing?

Well, Loch Ness water is murky brown a few feet down and filled with floating particles of peat. That makes the usual underwater exploration techniques pretty hopeless, the experts say.

Observation from boats is hard because of the great depths and the beasts' known fear of noise which sends it plunging. Helicopter and plane observation is ruled out for the same reason.

"Only a balloon might be feasible to drift above the loch," said skelton. "But that would cost too much."

Depth sounding is out because the Loch's sides are too sheer and there are too many temperature problems for sonar to prove anything, the investigation bureau says.

There is no reason why the loch should give up its dead. The sides are steep, the bottom lies under many feet of mud, there are no tides to wash dead monster bodies ashore.

Any attempt to capture the Monster alive might injure or kill a creature whose numbers and identity are unknown. Be sides, since 1934, it is protected by law.

But despite all the difficulties, it will be business as usual in the camp on Loch Ness this spring.

David James wants to organize a world symposium of marine biologists to sift all the evidence and theorize on what the next steps should be. One suggestion is that trained dolphins from Miami, Fla., might be shipped to Loch Ness to herd the monsters from their deep down hideouts.

One day, James hopes, he'll know whether the Loch Ness monster is fish, flesh or just red herring.

The slightly fitted coat is "Pretty Pink" and made along princess lines, while the white skimmer features white lace across the yoke with pink satin ribbon insertion. Seek Unity In Prayer Handling

By GEORGE W. CORNELL
AP Religion Writer

Civic ceremonies have a ritual of their own. Along with the introductions, quips, the rostrum flags, the speeches, there usually is an equitably apportioned round of prayers—by a minister a rabbi, a priest.

The impression given is that "each group has its own God," says the Rev. Dr. O. Walter Wagner of St. Louis, where the Interfaith Clergy Council has acted to get rid of such partitioning of prayer.

It recently set up a system under which only one clergyman at a time, on a rotating basic among the different faiths, fills the religious role at major community affairs.

"Public officials should not be put in the position of having to invite three to six clergymen to satisfy the prestige of the major faiths," says the council of Protestant, Catholic, Jewish and Orthodox clergy.

Dr. Wagner, ecumenical minister of the St. Louis Metropolitan Church Federation, said:

"Pragmatically, it is an embarrassment to have the repeat performances of three invocations or three benedictions or three unrelated prayers patched into programs.

"To sensitive people in all our faith families, it must be an affront to their faith to see prayer given 'Madison Avenue' treatment for public relations reasons."

Missouri government officials hailed the plan. It will "simplify and dignify" prayer at civic occasions, said a spokesman for the St. Louis mayor's office. It "makes our job much easier" in arranging events, said Lt. Gov. Thomas F. Eagleton.

Through the Interfaith Council, scheduling of clergymen for participation in public events is channeled through the office of the council's president, the Rev. Edward J. O'Donnell, a Roman Catholic.

The council said it will seek "as wide as possible" involvement of clergymen "so that the pastor of the smallest church or synagogue be given the responsibility of representing religion on public occasions."

Each clergyman, in turn, will represent the council, and serve his function in the name of God —rather than as a partisan representative.

Survey findings reported in the current Catholic Digest indicate that concepts of God are changing among Christians.

The study, made by the Gallup public-opinion organization, asked: "How do you think of God—as a loving father who looks after us; as some kind of supernatural power but don't know what; or how?"

Among Catholics and Protestants, the answers were almost in the same proportions, 76 per cent of Catholics and 77 per cent of Protestants consider God a "loving father." Most of the rest viewed Him as supernatural power.

Among Jews, 20 per cent thought of him as a "loving father," and 67 per cent as a supernatural power or in other terms.

In all three classifications, the percentage choosing the "loving father" category had declined since a similar study in 1952.

Diversified Dives

By RALPH DIGHTON
AP Science Writer

In street clothes, Norma Hanson looks like many another modern grandmother. Her husband, Al, with his gnarled hands, could be a jack of all trades and in a sense he is.

At first glance, Bob Howard would seem a classic example of the rising young executive.

Garland Suggs is a retired Navy officer and looks the part, but now he teaches school. His subject: survival in an alien and hostile environment.

Poles apart in many ways, all these people have one thing in common. All, including Mrs. Hanson, are hard-hat divers.

"Hard hat" is the name divers give to the metal helmet they wear with bulky rubber coveralls and lead-weighted shoes to descend to great depths or, in shallow water, to work all day in toast-dry comfort. The name has come to mean not only the helmet but the man or woman who wears it.

Not everyone can work well under water; only a few want to. How many welders, electricians, plumbers and mechanics know their jobs well enough to do them in the ptich-black darkness of the ocean floor? How many can shrug off traveling to and from work every day through 200 to 400 feet of bone-chilling water?

Those are some of the reasons hard hats are among the best paid workmen in the world, why top hands command up to $10,000 a month for high-hazard duty.

They save oil companies and construction firms many times their wages. They salvage costly equipment that otherwise would be lost; many times, a well could not be drilled, a bridge could not be built unless there were men on the bottom to direct the work of machines above.

But high wages are not the only lure to the hard hat. Hear Norma Hanson, only woman member of the Wilmington, Calif., commercial divers union telling of the crystal clear waters off Santa Catalina Island:

"My husband kept telling me how beautiful, how fascinating it was below. So I said, 'Send me down, too. I want to see.' He did, and I found out he was right. No one can describe how wonderful, how unworldly the bottom can be. If I lost my sight today I would already have seen enough beauty to last the rest of my life."

Mrs. Hanson is 43, her husband 56. Their son and son-in-law are divers and a grandson, now 9, has been diving three years in gear made for him by "grampa"—who takes him on weekend submarine excursions.

Al Hanson is a diver from the old school. He's worked the underwater oilfields, helped build footings for bridges, laid huge pipelines, even worked in the movies—he was a hard-hat standin for Paul Lukas in "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea."

Currently he is walking the bottom of Los Angeles Harbor, inspecting 40,000 pier and dock pilings for rot—a job he estimates will last several years. Norma frequently acts as his tender, or helper, running the boat and the compressor that pumps air through long hoses to her husband. Occasionally she takes jobs on her own, recently raised a 30-foot sport cruiser from the bottom off Santa Catalina Island, rigging the rope slings herself.

After the war he went into underwater construction, learning to handle wrenches, hammers, drills, saws and electric torches with near frozen hands, as did many of the old abalone crew. For a decade after the war, construction and abalone fishing were the main fields for commercial divers. Then, in the mid-1950s, a new field opened—offshore oil. Wellheads, pumping machinery, pipelines — all the apparatus of onshore wells—had to be installed in 200 to 300 feet of water. Only the hard-hat diver, used to working with tools by feel alone at depths where sunlight never penetrates, could do the job.

Oil companies made fortunes in the new underworld, and so did their divers. Incomes of $100,000 and $150,000 were not uncommon.

Gradually the supply of divers began to catch up with the demand. The industry took on a semblance of order and wages scales stabilized.

Divers belong to the Pile Drivers locals of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners, affiliated with the Building and Construction Trades Department of the AFL-CIO. Most of them can fill any job posted on the board in the union hall in Wilmington, a suburb of Los Angeles. They dive because the pay is better, many times the rate for the same job on the surface.

The current contract between the pile drivers and construction and drilling firms calls for a base pay of $191.50 per day for a diver who furnishes his own gear, helper and insurance. The helper—who also must be able to dive in an emergency—gets $48.50 and insurance (workmen's compensation) runs about 18 per cent of the total pay.

The $191.50 covers one dive per eight hour day down to 50 feet. Below 50 feet the diver gets a $1 a foot premium down to 100 feet. The premium increases on a sliding scale to $8 a foot between 250 and 275 feet.

For a 275-foot dive the premium is $600, which added to the base pay totals $791.50. Greater depths call for at least $10 a foot, subject to agreement between diver, union and contractor.

"Today a good man who wants to keep busy most of the year can gross about $30,000," says Bev Morgan, 35 and one of the new crop of divers who turned from abalone to oil in the early days of the offshore boom.

"That's about the going rate for Southern California and most of the rest of the world, except for the hot spots where there's an oil boom, like Alaska today. There a diver is guaranteed close to $4,000 a month and a lot of them are making $10,000."

Bob Howard, a college-trained hard hat, at 30 is diving executive for Global Marine Inc., which operates drilling ships around the world. He has dived as deep as 425 feet — to recover an object for the Air Force of Hawaii.

Howard says, "This is the craziest business in the world. Cram as you will, you never can learn enough about all the sciences that have application to diving."

Howard hires divers — including Morgan — for his firm's drilling projects.

"You have to know how to handle a diver," says Howard. "They're alone down there. Thinking for themselves, relying on their own judgment, turns them into the most independent cusses you'll ever meet."

"An engineer who is not a diver can have a rough time. If he is a little undiplomatic in telling a diver what he wants done below, the diver is quite likely to tell him: 'There's the suit, you go do the job,' " Howard says.

Despite his years, Howard has dived in most of the world's oceans. He started at the age of 16, near his home in Richmond, Ind., with a helmet made of an old hot-water heater, a garden hose and a discarded refrigerator compressor.

Howard's scientific bent has led him to undertake a series of lectures at Underwater Technology Institute in North Hollywood, Calif., where experienced divers offer a one-year, nights-and-weekends course in the theory and practice of diving.

The students, who pay $1,200 tuition, are machinists, truck drivers, clerks and others lured by the wages and excitement of diving.

Lt. Cmdr. Garland (Jack) Suggs, USN retired, former director of the Navy Deep Sea Diving School, is now a consultant. He has a record of 630 dives and was decorated for salvage operations at Pearl Harbor following the Japanese attack.

Now 63, with 40 years of diving experience, Suggs believes the hard-hat man with his many skills holds the key to the world's future prosperity.

"Our exploding population means we'll need more resources, and the only place left to get them from is the ocean," he said. "We're getting oil there now, and soon we'll be able to mine in the sea and harvest plants on its bottom."

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korean infantrymen manning a frontline guard post 45 miles north of Seoul killed two North Korean infiltrators Thursday, military sources reported.

The two North Koreans apparently were trying to sneak south through mountain trails. The sources said there was a brief exchange of fire in which two South Korean soldiers were wounded slightly.

A light submachine gun and a pistol, both Soviet models, hand grenades and ammunitions were reported found on the bodies.

BOGOTA, Colombia (AP) — About 80 armed bandits derailed a payroll train Thursday by blowing up the tracks, then killed seven policemen and three civilians on board, government spokesmen said. But the bandits missed the money.

The train's engineer was the only survivor.

Authorities said the $11,000 payroll the gunmen apparently sought had already been paid to railroad employes and was not on the train.

OTTAWA (AP) — Robert Thompson has resigned as National Social Credit leader, rousing speculation that his party may reunite with a rebel faction in French-speaking Quebec.

Thompson, on an Asian tour with other members of Parliament, said in Saigon that he quit because his party was not getting enough support from provincial organizations to "achieve its objectives."

His decision, which was accompanied by the resignation of the party's national president, Martin Kelln of Regina, Sask., was believed related to moves to reunite the party with Le Ralliement des Creditistes, which split from the Social Credit group in 1963.

The split came after Thompson decided to support the minority Liberal government of Prime Minister Lester B. Pearson against the wishes of some of the members.

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (AP)—Barend Biesheuvel, floor leader of the center Evangelist Antirevolutionary party ARP — has been named premier-designate by Queen Julina.

Biesheuvel is expected to organize a coalition including his own party, Liberals, Catholics and the rightist Christian Historical Union. The four parties together have 87 of the 150 seats in lower house of Parliament. The Labor party will remain the chief opposition group.

Jelle Zijlstra of the ARP, head of a caretaker government since last October, refused to form a new government last month and will become governor of the Dutch State Bank.

Hope For Change With New Leader

RIO DE JANEIRO, (AP) — Elected by congress, Marshal Arthur da Costa e Silva takes his place as Brazil's 22nd president Wednesday amid widespread hopes for change — some of them conflicting.

The 64-year-old army officer succeeds his military classmate and lifelong professional friend, Marshal Humberto Castello Branco at the helm of Latin America's largest nation.

For his four-year term, Costa e Silva will not have the free hand and extraordinary powers assumed by Castello Branco in the three years he has ruled since President Joao Goulart was toppled.

Castello Branco stripped over 600 Brazilians of their political rights without trial or judicial appeal, and he bypassed Congress with decrees that affected all facets of national life. The institutional acts under which he acted expire on inauguration day.

To carry out his program of renewed economic growth with emphasis in agriculture and free industrial enterprise, Costa e Silva will have a brand new constitution. It goes into effect on the day he begins his term.

The constitution increases presidential control over this sprawling nation of 82 million and over its Congress.

Costa e Silva's party, the National Renewal Alliance, also offers him a two-thirds edge in Congress. He has been promised a broad new national security law.

Costa e Silva is publicly pledged to continue Castello Branco's policies and carry out some of the reforms that his predecessor will leave on paper only.

His cabinet nominations list includes nen who once backed Castello Branco but came to disagree with him privately on policy.

Businessmen and farmers, politicians and laborers, have felt the squeeze of Castello Branco's reforms and his not totally successful fight against Brazil's debilitating inflation.

They want an end to the practice of letting living costs outpace salaries. Many oppose the political surgery carried out by Castello Branco in abolishing the country's traditional parties and turning over elections to Congress.

Politicians are hoping for an end to the iron control that curbed congressional initiative, stifled student and labor organizations, and imposed a two-party system. Nationalists and leftists are looking for an end to ostracism.

On the other hand the armed forces — the main power behind Goulart's overthrow and the rise of both Castello Branco and Costa E Silva — are firmly against a return to the old free-wheeling style of Brazilian politics.

Stores Offer Right Hat For All Spring Outfits

A hat is the whipped cream on a deicious dessert, if a dessert ooks good it looks still bet ter with whipped cream, and a woman's outfit is always more stunning with a hat. Not just any hat, of course, but one that does something for her and her dress, suit, coat, whatever she is wearing. She need never feel self-conscious in a room full of women where she is the only one with a hat, for after all, whatever the occasion, she is properly dressed.

And for all occasions, too, the local stores offer just the right hat. The little "after five" hats are as fragil and lovely as the tiny spring beauty with its white petals finely lined with pink. These are of nylon n e t that form a veil that must not come any lower than the top of the eyebrows and are topped with flowers, maybe three lovely roses. It is held in place with a hairpin and this is another very important duty of hairpins, for without one it would never stay in place. There are small hats made of flowers, too, for an evening of glamour.

When a woman told a saleswoman in a hat shop she couldn't weat hats, the sales woman smiled, looked about at her at the many types of hats, and invited the woman to sit down before the mirror. Then she proceeded to prove that she could, bringing forth hats that s h e felt the woman would look nice in.

Some women can wear any type of hat, but they are very few, and the wrong hat is worse than no hat at all. Some years there seem to be practically no hats that are becoming and there is need to search for one that is, but not this spring. Certainly the assortment offered is bound to have something for everyone without much looking, for there are all styles, and colors are unlimited, shades for all the new clothes, and yes, shoes, too.

There are few women who cannot wear the popular roller type for it is flattering. A hat that looks well for street or dress and may be plain or fancy with flowers. This hat comes in all colors, some with the brim turned up so high that it takes a tall woman to wear it.

There are hats with wide brims, some of the picture hats with brims wider than the shoulders, there are medium brims narrow brims and no brims. Some brims are straight some go up a little, some go down and some of them really droop.

If milady hasn't liked the high crowns of the passed years there are lower crowns, even the coolie styles of a few years back, but if she does like the high crowns they are still as popular as ever and some maybe even higher than before.

New this year are the tall pillbox styles, and the hats of fabrics fashioned in turban effect. There are the deep cloche, the soft crushable hats for travel, the wide brimmed sailor and the narrow brimmed sailor.

Straws of very kind are being shown this spring and there are hats with the crowns covered with flowers as well as hats entirely of flowers, big flowers, little flowers all colors and kinds, some that look so real they might have been picked from a garden.

Citrus colors are good, lime, orange, lemon, pinks in a l l shades, a color practically all women can wear, pastels, beige, white, navy, and of course, black, in solid colors or combinations of colors.

Hats for al! occasions form early morning until late at night, hats for street, for social events for church, for club dinners, for teas, for garden parties, for travel, for shopping, for anytime anywhere, for all ages, for all types, hats are as important to the well-dressed woman as gloves, for hats work magic. They are the difference of being dressed and being dressed up, of just looking nice and looking striking, a hat makes a costume it makes a lady, if it is the right type of hat, and the right hat can bring more glances in her direction and more compliments than anything she might wear.

Men make fun of women's hats? Applesauce. Not if they are beautiful hats, they bring only favorable comments from the males.

It is early spring, but still it is getting late, for this year Easter is early and it is time to look about for that lovely Easter bonnet, for a bonnet is as much a part of Easter as Easter eggs.

Husbands Suffer Socially

WASHINGTON (AP) — The office of protocol has a word to husbands of women ambassadors:

To the end of the table, boys. You sit between the salt and the dogcatcher.

At the ambassadorial level, wives never had it so good. Husbands never had it so bad.

So bad, in fact, there have been cases in which foreign ambassadors walked out rather than sit down to dinner with an ambassadorial husband ranked above the salt.

The wife of a U.S. ambassador holds equal rank with her husband at social gatherings involving protocol. She is seated, treated and feted as her husband's right hand.

Not so the husband of an ambassador.

"Nobody knows what to do with the husband of an ambassador," lamented Arthur J. White, husband of the U.S. ambassador to Denmark, Katharine E. White. "He just seems like a fifth wheel."

Fifth wheel, he is — at least at the dinner table.

"It's a physical thing," said a protocol office spokesman. A wife sort of fits in. But a husband — well, a husband of an ambassador is hard to classify. Just what is he?

"At a state dinner he would be seated behind wives of ranking guests. If there was a dogcatcher," said the spokesman, "he'd probably be ahead of him."

Four of the five women now holding ambassadorial rank are married, one recently. The bachelor girl ambassador is Margaret Joy Tibbetts, a career Foreign Service officer and ambassador to Norway.

Married ambassadors include Mrs. White, whose husband is former executive secretary of the New York Clothing Manufacturers Exchange.

Patricia Roberts Harris, U.S. ambassador to Luxembourg, is married to William B. Harris, an attorney. He was appointed a European legal consultant with the Department of State during his wife's tenure. He is ranked in the lower echelons.

Eugenie Anderson, former ambassador to Denmark and Bulgaria, is now serving as an ambassador to the United Nations. Her husband, John, an artist and photographer, was one of the first to inquire of his status. The Danes made him a "distinguished foreign visitor."

The newest wedding added new dimension to the fifth-wheel dilemma. Ellsworth Bunker married the U.S. ambassador to Nepal, Carol C. Laise, at Christmastime.

As a U.S. ambassador-at-large, Bunker outranks his bride. Since the highest resident State Department official in a country is the ambassador, was Bunker to live in some distant country?

The State Department caucused. It decided that at home — that is, Nepal — Mrs. Bunker ranked first. Anywhere else, Bunker is No. 1. Mrs. Bunker will be officially known as Mrs. Carol C. Laise, and Bunker will continue his roving ambassadorial assignments with headquarters in Katamandu, Nepal.

For other women ambassadors, the rule goes this way:

At home, and functions held within the embassy, place your husband anywhere you like. Elsewhere, he is behind the wives at the end of the table. Unless he has a title himself, he is called a distinguished foreign visitor.

A distinguished foreign visitor — the Danes' name for John Anderson — sounds titled, but it is a diplomatic way of placing one at the bottom of the list.

The matter has been known to peeve husbands somewhat, but so far none has made a case of it.

When Clare Boothe Luce was ambassador to Italy in the 1950s, she insisted her husband, Henry, be treated with ambassadorial rank.

The ensuing problems brinked on international incidents before the State Department protocol office made its ruling downgrading husbands.

"The problem," one spokesman said, "is that a husband—if treated equally — might very well outrank ambassadors of other countries. This constitutes grave insult. It's saying one of our husbands is better than one of their ambassadors.

"Such things have happened. We had a few incidents before we decided to clip the husbands' wings."

On at least one occasion, say diplomatic sources, two European ambassadors walked out of a formal state dinner because they were ranked below the husband of an ambassador. Several European ambassadors have boycotted receptions because they were out-ranked protocolwise by an unranked American.

HATS ARE IN—Miss Gail Crnic (left) is chick in a rayon and silk linen look sheath of yellow with white yoke, a white rolled brim straw hat. The white pumps she is wearing have medium heel and pearl buckles, her bag is white straw and short white gloves complete her Easter costume. Michael Landon Is Being Paid Much More Now

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — This week brought a footnote to one of Hollywood's outstanding rise-to-riches stories:

Michael Landon, who costars as Ben Cartwright's son Little Joe on television's "Bonanza," got a pay increase — from $11,000 to $12,000 per show.

"It sure beats my last job, which was selling blankets door to door," Landon reflected at lunch.

In previous jobs he handled hot cans in a soup cannery, worked in a ribbon factory and washed autos. He was unloading freight cars when a fellow laborer, a part-time actor, asked Landon to do an acting test with him at Warner Brothers.

That led Mike to Warners' acting school, a Little Theater, two movies, dozens of television shows and, eight years ago, "Bonanza." It brings him 5,000 fan letters a week.

Landon is 30, with green eyes, bushy brown hair and intense, handsome features.

In New Jersey his father's career as publicity man, theater manager and mail-order salesman had its financial ups and downs, and Mike earned boyhood spending money in ways that would inspire Horatio Alger.

"I'd pick used Christmas cards out of trash cans, erase the names or paste labels over them and sell them for two cents, a nickel or a chocolate bar. Who could turn down a little kid?

"I'd get old lamps at the dump and fix them and sell tinfoil and newspapers to junk dealers. I'd have been a great junk man.

"I'd stand in front of a diner and bet older guys in hot rods $1 that, on foot, I could beat their cars to the corner. I'd win — and buy two big steak sandwiches and cut them up for me and a dozen friends."

Mike threw the javelin 211 feet, 7 inches, then a high school record, and won a scholarship to the University of Southern California. He dropped out and went to work after injuring an arm.

His earnings now go into apartment houses, office buildings and beach property, some owned jointly with costars Lorne Greene and Dan Blocker. Mike also writes "Bonanza" scripts — five so far, which the producers bought for $2,500 to $2,750 each.

Does he find life pretty sweet? "Everything's going well, but that's not what makes you happy," he said. Then what does? "My family. My kids."

Mike and his wife Lynn have five at home in suburban Encino.

"I give the two little ones their bath and we sit in front of the fireplace. And then," said the "Bonanza" star, "they watch 'batman.'"

FLYING HIGH—Michealyn Chitty, San Mateo, Calif., received her "wings" after graduating from World Airways, Inc., Stewardess Training Course, with the Oakland-Based world's largest international charter airline. She is now flying the Pacific in World's 707 fanjets. Presenting the wings is Gwendolyn Ramond, director of Stewardesses. Michealyn attended Smith-Cotton High School and Central Missouri State College. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Chitty, 1911 East Ninth.

To Present Sedalians In Program

Four talented young Sedalians, all graduates of Smith-Cotton High School, and now furthering their musical education in colleges in the state, will be presented in a program by the Helen G. Steele Music Club at 8 p.m. Wednesday at Heard Memorial Club House. They are Diana Gray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Gray, 506 South Park; Tom Trout, son of Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Trout, 2600 East 12th; Mike Jonson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Neville Jonson, 1631 West Seventh and Mike Rooks, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Rooks, 314 South Park.

All four, while students at Smith-Cotton, were members of the chorus, soloists in the Messiah, had leading roles in the annual Variety Show, and all were members of the Madrigal, under the direction of Mrs. Geraldine Schrader, received letters in music and took part in the many music contests over the state. They are all members of Wesley Methodist Church and sing in the choir.

Diana Gray, a sophomore at Central Missouri State College in Warrensburg, began studying voice with Mrs. C. D. Demand, and has received Superior ratings from the National Federation of Music Clubs and I ratings at State Contests. As Miss Sedalia of 1965, she received a talent scholarship in the Missouri Pageant in Springfield.

Tom Trout is also a sophomore at CMSC and his vocal training began as a student of the late Mrs. A. R. Beach, and he studied piano with Mrs. Ray Hunt. He received a three year Superior pin from the National Federation of Music Clubs, I ratings at State contests and was selected outstanding senior vocalist.

Mike Jonson began his music training at the age of nine studying piano under Mrs. Jewell H. Thomas. He continued piano study during his high school days and began voice study with the late Mrs. A. R. Beach. In the fall of 1963 he entered Central Methodist College, Fayette, to study for the degree, Bachelor of Music Education, with an applied major in piano and minor in oboe. During his four years at Central he has studied piano with Professor Raymond R. Jones and during the summer months with Dr. Louis Kohnop of the National Music Camp, Interlochen, Mich.

Mike Rooks is a sophomore majoring in Music Education at Central Methodist College, Fayette. He played the French horn in Sedalia Symphony in 1964-65 season and currently is a member of the Opera Workshop and A Cappella Choir at Central Methodist.

He was a student of the late Mrs. A. R. Beach.

Karl Weber 'Stars' In Commercial

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Karl Weber remembers the day well, although the call was a routine one.

It was the fall of 1965 and he was busy in a sound studio, reading the sales pitch to be added to a television commercial for baked beans.

That job concluded, he went to a pay telephone, dropped a dime and dialed his answering service. Among three or four routine messages was a request from an art director that he audition that very day for a television commercial.

"It was mid-afternoon," Weber recalls, "and I had sprouted a 5 o'clock beard. And, of course, I had not seen the copy."

Weber, an actor with experience in Shakespearean stock, a graduate of radio soap opera and Broadway drama, won the audition, to be spokesman in a new advertising campaign for the Avis organization which rents automobiles and trucks.

It was the beginning of a campaign that cost $6 million last year alone to spread the word that Avis, only No. 2 in the car rental business, tries harder — harder, presumably, than No. 1 the rival Hertz organization.

Weber is the face and the voice in a novel advertising approach. The pitch is forthright, delivered wryly with a humorous snapper at the end. It shrewdly appeals to the traditional American love of the underdog. In December, when No. 1 decided it was time to hit back, the campaign generated even more industry talk and public amusement.

"We did the first 13 commercials a few days after I got the job," Weber recalled, "and the session lasted 10 hours. It took three hours just to get the lighting right."

Weber, a six-footer, had been much in demand for commercials for several years. But the limelight was really turned on when he became the "Avis man."

He had played Arthur Tate for two years in a soap opera, "Search for Tomorrow." He had played college presidents and villains in series from "Perry Mason" to "Hawaiian Eye." He had played Broadway, off-Broadway and stock. But the commercials brought recognition of a strange kind and along with it came more demands for his services and a big boost in his annual income. It almost compensates for the fact that the public does not know his name.

"I was on a subway platform the other day and a man walked up and said he thought I always drove around in a rented car. Truck drivers slam on their brakes, yell hello and wave furiously. It's very interesting."

Webber, a native of Columbus Junction, Iowa, got into acting while a junior at the University of Iowa in 1936. It was a stock company playing for the summer at the Cleveland Exposition.

Can't Kick Habit

Smoking Withdrawal Clinic Attempt Has Small Success

EDITORS NOTE - Now, every pack of cigarettes carries the warning. New filter tips with new claims hit the market. There is still talk of a "safe cigarette." And 38 months after they were warned, American smokers may be worried, but they're still smoking.

By ROBERT GOLDENSTEIN
AP Science Writer

CHICAGO (AP) — Just over three years ago, the advisory committee to the U.S. surgeon general warned that cigarette smoking was injurious to health. Today, cigarette sales are at an all-time high.

Health warnings now are required on cigarette packages, medical reports contending that smoking is harmful continue to pile up and anti-cigarette campaigns are widespread.

Yet some medical authorities estimate that each day 4,000 young persons try smoking for the first time. Cigarette withdrawal clinics report considerably more failures than successes in leading smokers to their goal of breaking the habit.

What happens next?

A survey of the situation shows that anti-smoking drives will be intensified, cigarette commercials may be dropped on television shows that appeal to youth, and scientists will continue efforts to find what they regard as a "safe" cigarette.

Action is proceeding on these fronts:

Scientists working under a grant from the American Cancer Society say they developed a very promising technique for testing whether a cigarette can be made "safe" or "safer" when smoke is inhaled directly into the lungs of experimental animals.

Various research groups are working with filters, modified tobacco and tobacco substitutes in efforts to come up with a "safe" cigarette.

The secretary of health, education and welfare and the Federal Trade Commission will take a new look this year at current information on the health consequences of smoking and the effectiveness of present warning labels on cigarette packages. The FTC will make new recommendations to Congress.

The FTC has decided to test cigarettes and publish its findings on the nicotine and tar content of the various brands. A bill before Congress would require cigarette companies to publish the tar and nicotine content on labels and the FTC laboratory would make a close check on claims.

The American Medical Association is supporting more than 40 research projects which its spokesmen say could produce answers to these questions: How does tobacco smoke produce damage to the human body? Why do some people appear to tolerate the effects of smoking better than others? Is there a single factor involved in tobacco smoke danger or are there several factors?

The American Cancer Society, asserting "far more must be done in the field of smoking and health," is planning to push its educational campaign in films, cartoon books, workshops, pamphlets and youth conferences "day in and day out and in a sustained and systematic manner."

The National Congress of Parents and Teachers, supported in its first year by $87,000 in funds from the U.S. Public Health Service, has undertaken a nationwide program in schools to keep seventh- and eighth-grade children from smoking. Key personnel in the educational program will be PTA representatives serving as "room mothers" in individual classrooms.

The cigarette industry, contending that no real proof has been put forward that smoking is harmful to health, has allocated nearly $20 million to independent scientists for research on the cause of such diseases as cancer and heart disease.

The Tobacco Institute, representing the industry, said in a statement:

"At the present time, we do not presume to know the causes of such diseases as lung cancer or heart disease. Nor do we believe the critics of smoking know the answers. We intend to continue to encourage scientists to investigate all facets of thet question without fear or favor.

The cigarette advertising code's "youth rule" became effective in September. It attempts to provide a buffer zone between shows with youthful appeal and commercials selling cigarettes.

It is apparent that all the research now under way will not yield new answers for some time, perhaps years. For the nation's millions of cigarette smokers, the problem and decisions haven't changed since the surgeon general's committee report on smoking and health.

The smoker still faces these choices: Continue the habit unchanged, cut down on the amount of smoking or quit entirely.

The American Cancer Society, the American Heart Association, the U.S. Public Health Service and various other medical groups and researchers state flatly that research has shown cigarette smoking is a serious health hazard.

On the other side, and fewer in number, some physicians, research personnel and health statisticians contend no proof of this has been forthcoming.

Prof. K. A. Brownlee, statistician at the University of Chicago, says that while statistics seem to support the theory that cigarette smoking causes lung cancer and other diseases, they also support other theories.

The main alternative to the smoking theory, he says, is the proposal that the kinds of people who smoke may also be the kinds of people who are more susceptible to certain diseases because of hereditary or genetic influences.

"My opinion is that the (surgeon general's) committee has not established the case for causality in lung cancer," he said.

The Council for Tobacco Research — U.S.A., the tobacco industry's sponsoring agency for a program of research into questions of tobacco use and health — takes the same position.

Smoking withdrawal clinics have had variable success in helping volunteers break the habit.

Roswell Park Memorial Institute, New York State's cancer research treatment center in Buffalo, reports that none of the 20 men who volunteered in its first smoking clinic were nonsmokers a year later. Only one abstained as long as eight months.

However, the Hinsdale Sanitarium and Hospital in the Chicago area, which has enrolled more than 1,000 smokers in withdrawal clinics, estimates that 30 per cent were not smoking one year later and can be classed as nonsmokers.

Willis C. Graves, who deals with the psychological aspect of the program at the sanitarium, was asked what it takes to break the habit.

"It takes a firm decision," he said. "You've got to really want to quit in the first place. We have no magic injection or pill that makes it easy."

Graves said follow-up studies showed that in addition to the more than 300 smoking cures credited directly to his clinic, 200 other persons—relatives or friends of the enrollees—quit smoking on their own.

Doctors as a group have been fairly successful in breeching the cigarette habit.

The American Cancer Society estimates that only 30 per cent of the nation's doctors now smoke cigarettes compared with 60 per cent before reports of health hazards in smoking appeared in the medical literature.

A technique for aiding individuals who have been advised to stop smoking because of chronic lung, stomach or circulatory diseases which threaten their lives has been developed by Dr. Irving Perlstein of the University of Louisville School of Medicine.

He gives patients a plastic cigarette case with a tight-fitting lid that holds one package. The tight lid prevents the patient from reaching into a pocket or purse with one hand to withdraw a cigarette.

Pasted on both front and back of the case are labels reading: "Do I really want a cigarette?"

"Many of the heavy smokers with whom I have come into therapeutic contact have been able to cut their cigarette consumption by as much as 50 to 75 per cent within the first three or four days by the simple application of this principle," he said.

Researchers have had conflicting reports on the value of tablets containing lobeline sulphate in breaking the cigarette habit. Lobeline resembles nicotine both chemically and pharmacologically. Like nicotine, but to a lesser extent, it has a stimulant effect on the central nervous system.

Why do people smoke?

Some researchers believe psychology may play a powerful role. They say a cigarette represents a reward a smoker can offer himself whenever he wishes and thus provides a psychological lift.

Although the surgeon general's committee labeled cigarette smoking a significant health hazard, it concluded there may be beneficial effects from smoking in the area of mental health.

Their report said:

"The drive to use tobacco being fundamentally psychogenic in origin has the same basis as other drug habits and in a large fraction of the American population appears to satisfy the total need of the individual for a psychological crutch.

"An attempted evaluation of smoking on mental health becomes more realistic if one is willing to confront the question, ridiculous as it may seem: What would satisfy the psychological needs of 70 million Americans who smoked in 1963 if they were suddenly deprived of tobacco? Clearly there is no definite answer to this question. . ." Whatever the reasons for smoking, more cigarettes are being smoked, although not necessarily on a per-capita basis. The Agriculture Department estimated total consumption last year was at a record high, 2.5 per cent above the previous year and 35 per cent higher than 10 years ago.

Report On Apollo's Woes

America's man to the moon program seemed all set with the triumphant completion of the Gemini flights last year. Then came Apollo, and the tragic acciden which killed three astronauts. What went wrong? Here's a full report by an AP space specialist, based on information from many knowledgeable sources.

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) —Virgil I. Grissom, the old pro of the crew, made no secret of his misgivings.

Grissom thought he and his two colleagues were being shortchanged in their training for the first manned Apollo flight. A few days before he died, he complained about the spacecraft trainer at Cape Kennedy.

The simulator, a duplicate of the Apollo cabin, wasn't working properly. One morning, in disgust, Grissom hung a lemon on it.

Grissom saw little prospect that Apollo would stay aloft for the hoped-for two weeks in February. He didn't seem too happy.

Others were worrying, too.

Nothing appeared to be going right in the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's man-to-the-moon program.

Rockets blew up in tests. There were troubles with the Apollo spacecraft. Schedules had slipped badly. Some government and industry people the Apollo project was falling apart at the seams.

In December, Joseph F. Shea, spacecraft manager of NASA's Manned Spacecraft Center, told a symposium of newsmen at Houston that "something like 20,000" failures of one kind of a other had been logged in tests of the Apollo cabins and engine sections.

Said Shea: "We hope to God there is no safety involved in the things that slip through."

Then, in a blazing, tragic climax to the Apollo ills, its three-man crew died Jan. 27 in a flash fire that trapped them in the cabin during a launch pad test.

Air Force Lt. Cols. Grissom and Edward H. White II and Navy Lt. Cmdr. Roger B. Chaffee might one day have flown to the moon. Instead, death caught them earthbound.

Were they cictims of haste, poor judgment, laxity in procedures and planningu Improper design? Overconfidence?

Immediately after the tragedy, NASA clamped a lid on most information about the fire. Officials said all data had been impounded by a board of review investigating the accident.

Slowly, through NASA reports and from reliable sources, the story is unfolding.

NASA Administrator James E. Webb told a congressional committee the agency had taken technical risks because of what he called an "austere budget." He and other officials denied that they jeopardized the safety of astronauts in an effort to beat the Soviet Union to the moon.

The Apollo 1 history is revealing.

NASA accepted the spaceship from North American Aviation Co., Downey, Calif., last August and shipped it to Cape Kennedy. The vehicle required two years to build, during which many changes were made when testing uncovered weaknesses.

Late last year everything was rosy. The Gemini program was nearing an end, two unmanned Apollo shots had experienced no major difficulties, and officials planned to move quickly into manned earth-orbit missions with the three-seat vehicle. They set a Nov. 15 launch date for Apollo 1.

Some talked optimistically of a manned lunar landing in 1968 — a year ahead of the goal set by the late President John F. Kennedy.

(But last Thursday, President Johnson was asked at a news conference whether the original moon timetable could be met. He replied that, "We have a very difficult undertaking. I am very hopeful we'll be able to keep it. I don't think there is any guarantee that we will at all.")

Things started to go wrong well before the January tragedy. There were bugs in the communications system, a power inverter, an oxygen pressure regulator and a water boiler.

The launching date slipped to December.

During an altitude chamber test, trouble developed in the environmental control unit—the ship's life support system. Porous nickel plates, through which coolant water is passed, were clogged. Investigation concluded it was faulty engineering. New stainless steel plates were designed.

A metal line in the water supply system cracked while being soldered under pressure.

The launch date slid into January. Finally the firing date of Feb. 26 was set.

"We'll try to go as long as long as the spacecraft will operate," said Shea. "It could be anywhere from an abortive lob shot down the Atlantic to two weeks."

Hard-nosed Grissom, veteran of Mercury and Gemini flights, was the command pilot on Apollo 1. He was irritated with the numerous problems and the lack of training devices. He gave the flight "a pretty slim chance" of going 14 days.

In an interview, Grissom indicated he, White and Chaffee were being rushed into a flight before they were ready.

"We've been hard - pressed for trainers and training time," he said. "If we had had to fly the first of December, I think we would have been hard-pressed to get ourselves ready."

For two days, at the symposium in Houston, officials had discussed the program in great detail and freely talked of problems.

Shea told of the thorough testing that is done on all systems.

"Now, whether we like it or not," he said, "that testing frequently shows our problems, a surprising large number of problems. We believe that the way we are going to get reliability into the system is by rooting out the failures.

"If you think in the world of failures, you can break it into these two parts: those that obviously have to be fixed and those that represent, for instance, a piece of instrumentation being out of spec (specification) a few per cent.

"The question is, is that important in terms of over - all program? I'd say some 60 to 70 per cent of the failures fall in that category and we have been trying to take an approach in the program that, in effect, says: Run the program in a balanced way, don't try to make everything too perfect, don't try to make anything too complex, or you'll never get the job done."

Shea mentioned problems caused by human error on the two unmanned flights. One involved improper wiring, the other the failure to call out a procedure to place a sealant in the heat shield area.

"Now that combination of problems, no one of which is major, still made us feel pretty nervous about the over-all system operation," Shea said. "We obviously fixed those problems but the question that you're always left with is how many are going to creep through the next time?"

Another speaker at the Houston symposium was J.B. Bramlet of the Saturn 5 rocket program office, Marshall Space Flight Center in Houston, Tex. Discussing the explosion of a Saturn 5 second stage in a test, he said somebody failed to connect fuel tank pressure switches needed as a safeguard in a leak check. Investigation revealed that "procedures, personal goofs and personal errors are the basic cause of the loss," he added.

On Jan. 20, the third stage of a Saturn 5 exploded on a Douglas aircraft test stand in California. Filler wire used for welding a titanium high-pressure sphere failed to meet specifications.

Hangar and altitude chamber tests were completed on the Apollo 1 ship and it was moved to Launch Complex 34 on Jan. 6 and placed atop its Saturn 1 booster rocket.

Pad testing was running behind schedule, so officials elected to eliminate a preliminary test in which the unmanned spaceship was to have been pressurized with 100 per cent oxygen — the astronauts' breathing system.

As a result, the first time the cabin was pressurized on the pad was when Grissom, White and Chaffee were inside on Jan. 27.

The test was called a "plugs-out" test and was intended to check the compatibility of the spacecraft and ground support equipment, communications and instrumentation systems and the ejection of electrical cables when the simulated countdown reached zero.

The exercise was classed as nonhazardous because there was no fuel in the rocket nor were any spacecraft pyrotechnics hooked up.

The astronauts were to have entered the cabin at the 218-foot level of the launch pad at 11 a.m. but were delayed until 1:19 p.m. by minor problems. The countdown at the time stood at 2 hours, 25 minutes.

Almost immediately the pilots reported a sour odor in the cabin. The count was halted and the test conductor called for the "watermelon gang" — a team of specialists whose job is to take air samples in a device that resumbles a watermelon.

The team did not show up right away. But the odor vanished quickly and the count was resumed. After an hour, a second call went out for the watermelon gang, and the team finally arrived. An air sample was taken. But nothing unusual was found.

Throughout the count, Grissom complained of poor communications, and several holds resulted. At one point, he reportedly told the control center: "If I can't talk to you five miles away, how can we talk to you from the moon?"

With the count down to its last 10 minutes, a hold was called because of the communications difficulties. Someone suggested that the test be postponed. This was overruled, because to redo the test would cost time.

The blockhouse planned to pick up the count a few seconds after 6:31 p.m. Shortly before that — perhaps as long as a minute — a small fire started under Grissom's couch on the left-hand side of the cabin.

NASA reported later that an electrical fault was regarded as the most likely source of ignition. Hundreds of protected wires, electrical connections and a major portion of the life support system were under Grissom's couch.

The fire was not noticed by the astronauts immediately because it was out of their view. The initial heat was absorbed by metal in the cabin and thus was not detected by instruments in the blockhouse.

White's heart rate rose briefly 40 seconds before the first report of fire — from Chaffee — then settled back to normal. Did White have a fleeting premonition of danger?

The cabin was in a 100 per cent oxygen atmosphere under pressure of 16.2 pounds per square inch. This was slightly higher than the outside sea level air pressure of 14.7 pounds, in order to force out any other gases that might be in the craft.

In pure oxygen, fire spreads at terrific speed. The material that apparently caught first in Apollo 1 was a nylon netting spread throughout the craft to prevent objects from floating into equipment crevices during weightless space flight.

The flames apparently then spread to adhesive fasteners placed at various locations so the astronauts could hang up loose objects. Solder joints melted, allowing streams of oxygen and an antifreeze like fluid to escape from the life support system and feed the blaze.

At 6:31 p.m. ground instruments showed an unexplained rise in the oxygen flow into the spacesuits. There also was indication of movement by one of the pilots, perhaps Grissom.

At 6:31:04 p.m., just as the countdown was about to resume, Chaffee made the first report of a fire.

The astronauts began emergency procedures. Ironically, the practice of these escape procedures had been planned later that night as part of the test.

White reached over to his left shoulder to actuate the inner hatch release handle. Chaffee remained in his seat to continue communications.

One of Grissom's first duties was to pull a handle to depressurize the cabin. He did not do it. Either the fire already had engulfed the handle or Grissom forgot it in his haste to remove the hatch.

The inward-opening inner hatch could not be removed while the cabin was pressurized because of the atmospheric weight pushing against it. It didn't matter. The flames spread so swiftly there was no time to remove the hatch.

At 6:31:09 p.m., White repeated the report of the fire, three seconds later the blaze was intense. Chaffee reported it was bad.

An automatic television camera peered through a spacecraft window from outside. Controllers watching screens in the blockhouse saw the interior of the cabin erupt in a mass of flame.

At 6:31:19 p.m. the heat had increased the internal pressure to 36 pounds per square inch. The sealed inner hatch ruptured. The first puncture was a long tear in the floor on Chaffee's side of the cabin.

With the internal pressure released, the flames — still mainly concentrated on Grissom's side — sped toward the hole, flowing over the couches of White and Chaffee.

The flames escaped into an area between the spacecraft's inner and outer hulls and licked through equipment access hatches in the heat shield, partially enveloping the outside of the craft for a moment.

NASA reported the three astronauts died within 18 seconds after the first report of fire. The fastest in twin-hulled hatch could have been opened from inside or outside was 90 seconds.

The death certificate listed the cause as axphixiation due to smoke inhalation. Later, Dr. Charles A. Berry, the astronauts' physician, said thorough analysis had fixed the cause more precisely as axphixiation due to inhalation of carbon monoxide.

Published reports that the pilots had been burned severely were termed false. Berry said the burns, the worst of which were Grissom's were not "of sufficient magnitude" to cause death.

Some medical experts raised a question about the carbon monoxide. They noted that it probably would take several minutes for a person to die of monoxide poisoning unless there was an extremely great quantity.

"There had to be a high level of carbon monoxide in the breathing equipment," Berry said. "We don't know how it got there — whether it came from environmental control system material or from the cabin after the suits were perforated by the fire."

There is a possibility that activated charcoal in the air-cleaning system might have become heated, introducing the poison directly into the breathing circuit.

Because the plugs-out test was rated nonhazardous, there were no pad safety personnel near the spacecraft. Nor was there any fire-fighting gear to cope with this type of fire.

There were 27 men at the various levels on the rocket gantry. They grabbed gas masks and rushed to the cabin level. But the masks were designed to protect against rocket fuel spillages and fumes and were ineffective against the smoke. Many discarded the masks and all 27 suffered from smoke inhalation."

Mistrial Declared In A Murder Trial

HUGO, Okla. (AP) — A jury deliberated 4½ hours and reported Thursday it could not agree on a verdict in the murder trial of Edward R. Kizer, accused of slaying Todd Whatley, once the world champion rodeo cowboy.

Judge Harry L. S. Halley declared a mistrial.

Whatley was slain in June at the Choctaw County fairgrounds while a rodeo dance was going on in an adjacent building. He was 45.

Kizer, who is 47, testified he went berserk when he saw Whatley scuffling with Mrs. Kizer in Whatley's car.

Big Salary Common In Capital

WASHINGTON (AP) — A generous Congress has pushed the salaries of its top employes to such levels that the House postmaster makes $550 more yearly than the postmaster of Chicago.

In the affluent society on Capitol Hill, $20,000-a-year jobs are commonplace. There are 494 of them, ranging up to the $28,500 paid to the head doorkeeper of the House — only $1,500 less than a member of Congress gets.

And while Congress talks of whittling down the Great Society programs, there are no signs that an economy wave threatens the spectacular success of its own private war against poverty.

Over-all payroll costs have skyrocketed 84 per cent in the House and 53 per cent in the Senate in the last six years. They are continuing to rise as the staffs of members and committees on both sides of the Capitol steadily expand. The House payroll increase by $6.4 million last year and staff additions just approved by the Senate are expected to increase the payroll 18 per cent. Senate committee costs more than doubled between 1956 and 1966—climbing from $4.7 million to $9.6 million.

Senate salaries totaled $25.89 million last year. The House total was $46.5 million.

In many cases, the salaries being paid appear to have little relationship to the economics of the market place.

The House postmaster, with less than 100 million pieces of mail to deal with yearly, gets $24,500 a year. Chicago's postmaster, responsible for 6.6 billion pieces, gets $23,950. The Senate, which generates less mail, pays its postmaster $19,636, about $1,000 more than the postmaster gets in Cleveland, where the mail runs to 1.8 billion pieces.

The manager of the bank that keeps accounts for the 435 members in the House gets $20,800 a year; the cashiers, $14,800. Banking sources say the manager of the average small private branch bank makes $10,000 or less and the cashiers' pay ranges from $4,000 to $7,000. The Senate has no bank.

Fed by nearly annual pay raises, protected by patronage and all but screened from public view by formidably inadequate bookkeeping practices, the fat salaries have spread across Capitol Hill.

The shorthand reporters who record debate make $22,000 a year; the men who call the roll and those who record it make $19,200. The Senate chaplain, who reads a brief prayer to open each session, gets $15,880. The House chaplain gets $15,550.

Persons doing routine office work can make as much as $12,000, and messengers nearly $10,000, but at the lower job levels salaries are generally more in line with those outside Congress.

Salaries paid by the senators and representatives to their own staff aides also are more attuned to normal office practices, and the employes put in long hours, frequently working six days a week.

But aside from the members own staffs, many House and Senate employes have duties only when Congress meets. This averages about four days a week, with recesses between annual sessions.

The legislative committees are a major source of the $20,000-and-up jobs. There are 133 of them on Senate committees, 79 on House committees and 14 on joint committees. The ceiling is $25,890 for both House and Senate committee staffs. The Senate boosted its top only last week to match the House.

Each House member is entitled to pay one staffer in his or her own office at the top rate of $20,850, but only 127 of the 435 do so. In the Senate, which has higher allowances, 109 aides get more than $20,000. In addition, the Senate itself has 25 top jobs, such as secretary, parliamentarian and sergeant-at-arms, paying more than $20,000, and the House has seven.

Congressional employes are eligible for the government's pension system under which a person with 30 years' service can retire at a little more than half-pay. Employes contribute 6½ per cent of their salary to the pension fund; the government chips in another 6½ per cent.

Without defending all the salaries being paid, some members say that in Washington the demand for people with legislative expertise is so great the employes can command impressive pay. But others shake their heads in despair when they discuss congressional pay scales.

"Everybody around here is being paid too much," says one junior member. "But what can you do about it?"

Most jobs are gained through political friendships and once installed, the jobholder is rarely dislodged. The Rev. Frederick Brown Harris has been Senate chaplain for 22 years.

H. H. Morris, the House postmaster, came to Washington from New Castle, Ky., 35 years ago under the patronage of the late Virgil Chapman, then a Kentucky representative and later a senator. Morris, then assistant postmaster, moved into his present job in 1955.

The House doorkeeper, William (Fishbait) Miller, has been working for the House for 35 years. He became head doorkeeper in 1949, a job that puts him in charge of about 300 people. Miller is the man who ushers in presidents and other dignitaries and introduces them to the House and Senate in joint sessions.

Congress' generosity with taxpayers' money is not limited to its employes. Prodded by the newsmen covering its activities, it has come up with $175,000 for a handsome suite of rooms and studios for radio and television correspondents, and $80,000 to refurbish the press gallery — including wall-to-wall carpeting.

Nor is it only through salaries that the House rewards its workers. At an estimated cost of $12.9 million, which undoubtedly will be higher when the final cost is known, two underground garages for employes are nearing completion on Capitol Hill.

The garages have three levels, capable of parking a total of 1,276 cars. With 1,650 spaces tucked into the bottom four levels of the Rayburn Building, 869 places on the Capitol grounds, and 1,892 Senate parking places, there are nearly 6,000 spaces available on Capitol Hill — none of which are open to the thousands of tourists who come to see their Capitol each day. And if the visitors do find a place to leave their cars they have to pay 25 cents each for a guided tour. This revenue is pooled and divided among the guides, netting each of them about $12,000 a year. A Senate-approved bill pending in the House would eliminate the charge.

Tourists also find it hard to get anything to eat at the Capitol, although the taxpayers contributed more than $500,000 to help operate House and Senate restaurants last year. The money went to make up ever-mounting deficits — $260,000 in the Senate and $245,000 in the House.

The House recently raised restaurant prices 10 per cent in an effort to trim the deficit by $50,000, but early indications are that a drop in business, not in losses, will be the main result. The prices are now comparable with those in commercial restaurants, but the congressional restaurants primarily have only a luncheon business and yet have to remain open whenever Congress is in session, making it hard to operate economically.

Another extra: Haircuts. They're free for senators in the Senate barber shop. The House clings to its half-price haircut, with the public paying the other half. It employs 10 barbers at salaries of $6,000 each and lets them keep all the money they take in at $1 a head. Senate barbers also get a basic $6,000 a year. Tips average about $1.25 per haircut.

In most cities the going price is $2 or more. The Capitol barbers buy their own supplies, but pay nothing for rent or utilities.

The House and Senate also provide swimming pools and gym facilities for their members with full-time attendants on the payroll, and appropriate $13,000 each to operate chauffered limousine for the leaders of both parties.

In all, the cost of the legislative function in Washington has climbed precipitately in the last decade. In 1957 appropriations for the House, Senate and Library of Congress totaled $78 million. This year the request is for $178 million. There have been similar increases — along with high-salaried positions — in the other branches of government, however. Appropriations for the judiciary jumped from $40 million to $98 million during the same period, and spending for the executive office of the President went from $10.4 million in 1957 in the current request for $28 million.

Civilian federal employes — including civilians at the Defense Department — now total 2,848,179. The total 10 years ago was 2,387,015.

The last attempt Congress made to control the population explosion on its own payroll was in 1946 when it passed a law limiting each standing committee to 10 staff members — four professional and six clerical.

The dismal failure of the law is illustrated by the fact that today, Senate committees limited to 150 staffers by the statute, employ 615. What the committees did was create subcommittees, which then hired their own staffs.

The leading example of such proliferation is the Senate Judiciary Committee. It has spawned 16 subcommittees and now employs 198 staffers, 106 of them professionals.

A few weeks ago Sen. Allen J. Ellender, D-La., tried to lop off one of the subcommittees which had been set up 15 years ago to conduct a study of juvenile delinquency.

Going back to the original action, he showed it was intended that the subcommittee would complete its work in one session and disband, with a total expenditure of $50,000. The Senate listened politely and overwhelmingly approved a 16th year for the subcommittee, which has now spent $1.3 million. On Monday, the Senate defeated 51 to 23 Ellender's move to block authority for Senate committees to hire 48 additional staffers at salaries up to $25,890.

Sen. Abraham A. Ribicoff, D-Conn., a former secretary of health, education and welfare, backs continued expansion of committee staffs.

Ribicoff said when he first came to the Senate he was shocked at how little Congress knew of the working of the bureaucracy. As a result, he said, the legislative branch had become subservient to the executive branch. Congress needs the added knowledge that extra staff help brings in order to reassert its legislative role, he said.

In the House, an effort to bring congressional hiring and pay practices under some sort of control is being made in the administration committee and the House clerk's office. A newly elected clerk, former Rep. Pat Jennings, D-Va., reportedly has eliminated some jobs which he found to consist mainly of drawing a paycheck. Jennings wouldn't discuss the matter.

One reform that administration committee members would like to see is the adoption of budgets by House committees. Now, millions of dollars are appropriated each year to run committees, largely on the strength of the chairman's statement that that is what he needs.

"It's a helluva way to run things," says a concerned member.

Betsy Left Ugly Wake Of Ruins

When they filmed "Band of Angels," a century-old cypress tree towered above, and shaded the camera crew. Now, at the 126-year-old Ashland Plantation, the cypress is only a gnarled stump beside the pond.

At Voisin, another of the famous mansions that dot the banks of the Mississippi between New Orleans and Baton Rouge, rain has soaked the crumbling floors through the half-open roof. Voisin was built in 1785, nearly 200 years ago.

So it is along the River Road. The owners of these and other plantation homes shake their heads when they think of the damage wrought some 18 months ago by Hurricane Betsy. Of the homes many are suitable neither for living nor for movies now.

In the wake of the storm, and the financial problem of recovery from it, many of these old properties are facing a drastic turnabout. Where they once produced common goods like sugar and cotton, they may finally become chemical plants, punctuated with smokestacks instead of colonnades.

Dunboyne, where a grandniece of George Washington once lived with her husband, is being torn down. Built in the early 1800's, it is on a 2,600-acre tract recently sold to Union Carbide Co., which plans to erect a plant there.

The old homesteads offer ideal locations for the mammoth petrochemical operations that use Mississippi River transport. Land prices have soared to $1,000 to $2,000 per acre.

Louisiana appears caught between a desire to implement industrialization and a horror that the history and beauty embodied in the River Road homes will be destroyed. The plantations along the 80 miles of winding river have long been a big tourist attraction.

Industrial growth is a threat: Betsy's damage in September, 1965, is an accomplished fact.

Helvetia, standing since the late 1700's, was destroyed by the storm. Its roof was lifted off and never seen again. The owners say it was dropped into Mississippi. The steps and slave-made brick foundations still stand. The rest of the manor home was sold to scrap dealers.

The vicious winds toppled a chimney at Oak Alley, built in 1836, and bricks crashed through the third and second-floor ceilings. Shuttered doors and windows popped. Some of the famed oaks lining the entrance drive were shredded.

Oak Alley is being restored to top condition. Owners of other damaged homes are attempting to make repairs, but it is an expensive undertaking. Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Hayward Sr., owners of Ashland Plantation, said they ran out of money trying to bring the mansion back to its pre-storm condition.

"It takes a gold mine to keep it up," said one of the owners of Dunboyne.

The female of the giant California condor lays only one egg at a time and does not lay every year.

Spring Shoe Selections For Everyone

The local shoe stores have loads of beautiful shoes for spring and it would be an impossible-to-please girl or woman who couldn't find something to her liking, for everything, just everything seems to be in style.

So you don't like the pointed toe, well toes are more rounded, but pointed toes are not out of style either, and there are square toes, too. In fact the only kind of toe that isn't in is the one that is out, the toeless shoe. But now with the back of the shoes it is different, they are both in or out, whichever she might prefer for the cut-away is popular and fancy.

Speaking of fancy, so is the trim. Bows and buckles dress up the pumps, or the pumps may be worn plain. The bows, many of them, just clip on, and so do the big buckles in pearl, gold, silver, all kinds and there may be little strips of color put in them or just the buckle alone with the shoe color showing through.

The most popular heel is the mid-heel, and that comes in different shapes, the graceful little dress heel and various kinds of walking heels. The high heel isn't as popular as it was, but the high heel is never completely out of style. The lower heels, however, are more comfortable and the women like them better. Then there are the low heels, flats and loafers.

Colors, well practically anything, for the colors of the shoes are taken from the new shades of the spring clothes. Navy, pink, blue and bone are top colors and of course, black and white. There are multi-color shoes, too, and there are multi-color buckles that may be purchased to go on them, and some are beige and gold. Citrus colors are very good, too.

Patents, leathers, nylon straw, it doesn't make much difference what she likes, what she wants, this year she can find it, she can step into the local shoe stores and step out into spring with shoes that rival the jonquils, the flowering almond, the forget-me-nots, and the lilies-of-the-valley, for the shoes are as lovely as the flowers of spring.

Kosher Irish Defend Food Favorites

NEW YORK (AP) — Green matzoball soup and green bagels for dinner? Rosalyn Finkelstein, a Jewish lass from the Bronx, as colleen Queen Esther at a St. Patrick's Day celebration?

"Green bagels," assured Michael Mann, president of the Loyal League of Yiddish Sons of Erin. "They're good if you acquire a taste for them. We're kosher Irish."

What's more there will be prime beef O'Malley, litvak chopped liver and kishka a la Killarney on the menu Saturday night at the sixth annual "gathering of the clan" — the Irish-Jewish clan in Manhattan.

"It's pretty much a sort of celebration for the common heritage of the two ancient civilizations — Irish and Jewish," explained Mann, a Jew whose father was a harnessmaker in Dublin.

"Now in our adopted land, we celebrate the fruits of our friendship," Mann said.

To belong to the Loyal League of Yiddish Sons of Erin, you must be a Jew born in Ireland.

The celebration is called the "Erev St. Patrick's Day Banquet." Erev in Hebrew means holiday eve.

The league is combining March 17, St. Patrick's Day, with March 26, Purim, most festive of Hebrew holidays commemorating Queen Esther's success in preventing a Persian tyrant from wiping out her people.

Miss Finkelstein, 20, is a great-granddaughter of Elia Isaacson, who as a leader of the Jewish community in Dublin founded a synagogue there.

Mann expects some 140 men and women at the celebration. The members of the loyal league on hand will number less than 100, including some from along the eastern seaboard states and as far south as Florida.

Invited Irish guests will account for the rest of the diners, and they should know:

A bagel is a small, chewy hard roll with a hole in the center like a doughnut. It may be eaten plain, with butter or cream cheese. It is a favorite when spread with cream cheese and a slice of lox, a type of smoked salmon.

Matzoballs are dumplings made mainly of Matzos crumbs and eggs, usually cooked in chicken soup.

Smothers Brothers In Top Spot

By BOB THOMAS
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "Either way, we couldn't lose," argues Tom Smothers, one half of the brother team that bumped "Bonanza" off the top of the Sunday night audience ratings.

The Smothers brother's reasoning: "If we had failed to beat 'Bonanza,' people wouldn't have blamed us, since they thought it was impossible. And if we did beat 'Bonanza,' people would say we were miracle workers."

Tom admitted that he is glad it turned out the latter way, rather than the former.

Of course the trend may be reversed, but CBS was enough encouraged to place the Smothers on its fall schedule.

"Yes, it looks pretty good for us," admitted Tom at his office; he is the comic of the team and, like most comics, a worrier.

"The ratings have been holding up and seem to be establishing a pattern. The better the movie on ABC, the better the chance we have of beating 'Bonanza' (on NBC). It appears that the viewers who want drama will watch either of the other networks, while those who want comedy and music will tune us in."

Why does he think the Smothers Brothers Show has succeeded after others have failed opposite "Bonanza"?

"It must be Dick and I," he replied without false modesty. "People must like us or they wouldn't turn on our show."

Yet apparently not enough liked the boys in their half-hour situation fantasy which flopped last season. Tom has an answer for that: He figures he and Dick were miscast in a show that didn't bring out their real personalities. Besides, he argues, the show developed a respectable rating but CBS pushed the panic button too early.

Tom contemplates an unlimited future for the brothers in the hour-long variety format.

"The best part of the show is how Dick has been able to prove himself," he said. "Straight men traditionally are underrated in this business. Dick has proven that he is much more than just a straight man. He has shown remarkable poise in introductions and has established himself as a singer. He's also great with comedy."

And how does Tom feel about the other half of the team?

"I get worried about Tom," said Tom. "Sometimes I think he plays too broad; I think he picked up some bad habits during the half-hour series. I'm trying to get him to play it more cool."

An altruist is a person who places thoughtfulness for others about his own selfish interests.

Mrs. Lynn Riecke Snow

Carolyn Alderman-Lynn Snow Exchange Vows On March 4

The Rev. Harry Foockle read vows of marriage in a double ring ceremony for Miss Carolyn Sue Alderman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Alderman, Cole Camp, and Mr. Lynn Riecke Snow, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Snow, Route 1, at half past six o'clock, Saturday evening, March 4 at the New Bethel Methodist Church, rural Sedalia.

The altar was flanked with nine branched candelabra entwined with greenery and large white satin bows. The family pews were marked with large white satin bows.

Miss Carol Dump, Sedalia, organist, played traditional wedding selections and accompanied Miss Vesta Elliott, also of Sedalia, as she sang "The Wedding Prayer" and "The Lord's Prayer."

Serving as candlelighters were Mr. Cournel Williams, Cole Camp, and Mr. Douglas Alderman, Ava, cousins of the bride.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a wedding gown of Provence lace and peau de soie in an Empire silhouette. The heightened bodice was designed with long tapering sleeves and a rounded neckline, with a tracery of pearls highlighting the center front waist. Lace formed a flaring A-line overskirt, with a detachable train of peau de soie falling from the high back waist and extending to chapel length. A crown of pearls and imported sequins held her elbow veil of French illusion and her flowers were an arrangement of white glamellias enhanced with glazier ivy and tied with white satin ribbon. She wore her grandmother's wedding ring to signify something old.

Attending as maid of honor was Miss Janet Dieckmann, Route 1, and Miss Marie Carpenter, Kansas City, was bridesmaid. The attendants wore identical street length dresses of de-lustered pink satin with long tapered sleeves and a rounded neckline. The Empire waistline flowed into an A-line skirt. They carried single pink Duchess roses.

Mr. Duane Snow, brother of the groom, Columbia, was best man, and Mr. John Webb, cousin of the bride, attended as groomsman. Ushering duties were performed by Mr. Joe Mazza, Warrensburg, and Mr. Clayton Riecke, Sedalia.

The bride's mother wore a pink knit suit with matching accessories and a corsage of white glamellias. The groom's mother selected a turquoise and white suit with matching accessories and a corsage of white glamellias.

A reception was held in the church basement for approximately 170 guests following the ceremony. The bride's table was covered with a net skirt and decorated with smilax and pink satin bows and was centered with a three tiered wedding cake decorated with pink roses and cupids and topped with frosted bells and lily-of-the-valley. The cake was flanked by pink lighted tapers and encircled with sprengerie fern. The wedding cake was baked by Mrs. E. J. Kerksiek, Cole Camp.

Serving at the reception were Miss Linda Tye, Warrensburg, and Miss Linda Kroenke, Mora. Miss Janet Donnell, Jefferson City, was in charge of the guest book. The gift table was attended by Miss Linda Lucille Schumacher, Cole Camp. Distributing rice bags were Miss Kristine Bohon, Miss Kimberly Williams, and Master Jeffery Alderman.

For a wedding trip through southern Missouri and Arkansas, the bride chose a two piece dress of navy blue and white crepe with matching accessories. Her corsage was of white glamellias taken from her bridal bouquet.

The bride is a graduate of R-I Benton Co. High School, Cole Camp and is attending Central Missouri State College, Warrensburg. Also a graduate of Cole Camp High School, the groom is attending CMSC.

The couple resides at 422 East Jackson, Warrensburg.

Following the rehearsal on March 3 a buffet dinner was given in honor of the bride and groom at the home of the groom's parents.

The bride was honored at several showers given by Miss Janet Dieckmann and Mrs. Melvin Dieckman, on Feb. 11; Mrs. Lyle Webb and Mrs. Herbert Williams, on Feb. 19 in Cole Camp; and a fellowship supper and shower were given in honor of the bride and groom at the New Bethel Church on Feb. 25.

The Rev. W.H. Savvert, California, performed the double ring ceremony before an altar adorned with candelabra and arrangments of pink carnations and pink and white gladioli.

Mrs. David Roedel, Prairie Home, accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Roy Edwards, also of Prairie Home, sang "The Wedding Prayer" and "The Lord's Prayer".

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of Chantilly lace, lined with whisper weight bouquet taffeta. The bodice featured a modified scoop neckline with scalloped edges and traditional long sleeves tapering to points over the wrists. The softly styled high waist was finished with natural scalloped edge lace and the controlled A-line skirt was also finished at the hemline with the natural scalloped lace. The wide chapel length train of lace and tulle with three bands of scalloped lace completely around the border, fastened at the shoulders. Her elbow length veil of illusion was secured by a beaded crown. She carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations with a touch of white net petals and satin bows.

Miss Frieda Fletcher, Kansas City, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a blush pink floor length gown of Chantilly lace and organza peau with an Empire waistline. The all lace bodice featured a wide neckline with long sleeves. Her headpiece was of bows of petals made of the same material as her dress with a short bouffant veil of nylon maline. She carried a cascade of pink carnations.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Egdorf

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Egdorf Celebrate 50th Year Together

Miss Elnora Vannatta, affectionately known to her friends as Nora, and Chris Egdorf were married on March 3, 1917, and Chris smiled as he said that as ticket agent for the Katy he was making $60 a month.

"But," said his wife, "house rent was only $18 and you could get all the steak you could eat for a quarter. You could live just as well as you can today."

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Egdorf held open house on their 50th wedding anniversary Sunday, March 4, at their home at 1511 West 16th and the dining table was covered with a lovely embroidered cloth and centered with a huge arrangement of yellow roses. Throughout the home were many other arrangements all the same golden color, gifts from friends, which she loved, of course, but as she looked at the roses on the table she said proudly, "Those are from my husband."

Chris Egdorf's job with the Katy grew and took him many places where he met interesting and famous people, but always in his mind was the idea that when he retired he would come back to Sedalia, and so when he reached retirement age he said, "We came back where we started."

The marriage took place in Jefferson City at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Eli Jenkins, by Rev. James E. McDonald, and after the ceremony they were to catch a Katy train at North Jefferson for St. Louis but arrived at the station just as the train pulled out, he had to pay their own way down on the Missouri Pacific, where they could have gone on the Katy on a pass.

Mrs. Egdorf, the daughter of Charlie and Harriet Taylor Vannatta, grew up in Houstonia and Chris grew up at 320 East 13th where they had a large garden area, a milk cow and chickens. He started carrying papers in 1903 and that year and the next carried the Kansas City Star and Times and St. Louis Republic. Later he started carrying the Sedalia Capitol in Southwest Sedalia and would get up at 4 a.m. go to the Old Woods Opera House (now the Terry Hotel) where the paper was published. On his route were the Dickman residence at 16th and Quincy and the Damon Porter home at 16th and Beacon. These were the only two houses west of Grand Avenue. That was a long ways to deliver two papers, he said, and it seemed to him that he waded snow many times.

Major James was the circulation manager for the Capital and suggested he could give him a much better paying route if he had a horse. The pay was $13 a month, and the route was East of Ohio and all the outlying areas to the North, East and then South on Marshall Ave., to 16th, and a scattering of houses as far South as 24th and Ingram between to Washington. It required about 2½ hours. During this time in the evening he also carried the Sedalia Sentinel and Democrat. On Sunday mornings this proved to be a difficult assignment. His brother Otto took over the horse route and at the Democrat he graduated from a regular route carrier to utility carrier when a carrier boy was sick he took over.

When he was older he had summer jobs at the Katy Shops, working in the mill at ten cents an hour, 10 hours a day including Sunday and no overtime, or extra for Sunday work. He was graduated from Sedalia high school and Central Business College, and was a stenographer and clerk for the City Water Co., with only two besides L. P. Andrews to operate the office, read meters and get out the monthly statements.

When the Mexico border difficulty arose he enlisted in the Army thinking he would be sent to the border but instead he was sent to Vancouver Barracks, Wash., and later to Ft. Douglas, Utah. He was made company clerk and had his own private room just off the Orderly Room and soon was made corporal and then sergeant. After receiving his discharge and returning home his neighbor, W. C. Etzbach, who was ticket agent for the Katy wanted him to learn the business. For three months he kept him busy looking up destinations, preparing train schedules, rates and costs of Pullman fares, and in Nov. 1915 the night ticket seller was transferred to Oklahoma, and he was appointed to take his place, and in 1916 Egdorf became ticket agent.

The waiting rooms were filled with all phases of life, he said, wedding parties, sadness of mental patients being taken to Nevada, funeral parties, young men going into service during World War I.

During the State Fair there were shuttle trains operated to the Fairgrounds every 15 minutes and as the Katy owns the tracks next to the buildings on West Main the shuttle trains would stop in front of the Missouri Pacific station where there was a ticket selling booth. There were excursions, too, from Hannibal, Moberly, Fayette, Columbia, Boonville, Nevada, Clinton and intermediate stations.

Egdorf was transferred to Oklahoma City in 1926 as city ticket agent and chief clerk to the Division Passenger Agent, and it was there that he talked with and sold tickets to Will Rogers. In 1928 he was transferred to Tulsa where he was city passenger and ticket agent.

In 1931 he was transferred to Dallas. The Publix, RKO and Interstate Theatres were headquartered in Dallas, the Interstate later absorbing the other two, but it was here he met many theatrical people, among them Amos and Andy whom he knew well. Wayne King told him he was from Clinton and his father was a Frisco railroad man. He knew Cab Calloway, Rudy Vallee, Nick Lucas, Dizzy Dean, many, many actors, musicians and other prominent people whom he welcomed and arranged accommodations for them for the railroad.

Among the famous people of the world he has met was Anton Lang who played the Christ in the Passion Play. He was having difficulty for none of the party spoke English but when Egdorf spoke to him in German he rose up out of his chair and threw his arms around him, he was so glad to find someone who could understand him.

He liked the Truman family, too, and thought Margaret was one of the finest young women he ever met.

When Roosevelt visited there he was making arrangements in the hotel for the party and got locked in before the presidential party arrived. He finally convinced the secret service man who he was and what he was doing there and they let him out.

Mrs. Roosevelt, said Mrs. Egdorf, was homely in her pictures but she said she was very close to her and she was not homely at all. That particular day she was wearing a large hat and was very stunning.

It was a busy, interesting work, all types of people, Mr. Egdorf said, and Mrs. Egdorf told about the theatre tickets they received, enough for friends, and when all the plays were appearing there first before going on to other places, she and a friend attended morning and afternoon and then were joined for the evening shows by their husbands.

They had just built a new home in Dallas and in 1945 he was transferred to Kansas City.

When he was retired they returned to Sedalia where they built a home exactly like the one in Dallas, a very lovely home, where he had made cement blocks and built a patio in the back. He makes many things including darling little pin cushions out of fruit jar lids, little chairs for pin cushions out of beer cans, and many other things.

Everywhere, everywhere they have made such wonderful friends and 150 of them attended the golden wedding Sunday afternoon.

At one end of the table was a coffee service and the other a punch bowl where with Mrs. W. E. Johnson, Mrs. Roy Lierman, Mrs. LeRoy Hodges all of Sedalia and Mrs. Egdorf's sister, Mrs. Helen Sitton, Jefferson City, pouring. Another sister, Mrs. Paul Killion, served, as did Mrs. Ora Edwards, Mrs. Lawrence Brown, Mrs. Charles Spillers, and Mrs. Everett Stumpf.

Mrs. Arbie Chamber and Mrs. Terry Pile presided at the guest book.

From out of the Sedalia area guests were Mr. and Mrs. John Higgins, Mr. and Mrs. Irl Nilson, Mrs. Will Pebley, all of Kansas City and Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Denton, Stokesbury; Mr. and Mrs. Cleo Little, Mr. and Mrs. John Moylan and Mrs. Albert Ulrich, all of Kansas City.

A reception dinner was held at Edmond's Restaurant following the ceremony. The banquet table was centered with a three tiered wedding cake decorated with white sugar bells, aqua roses and topped with a miniature bride and groom. White honeycomb bell place cards and arrangements of yellow pom pons centered with aqua candles completed the decorations.

For traveling, the bride chose a white wool dress with black patent accessories and a corsage of yellow pom pons.

After a brief wedding trip to Kansas City, the couple will reside in Warsaw where the bride is a senior at Warsaw High School. The groom is presently employed with Safeway Stores, Inc. in Sedalia.

Easter Early Observance Of Spring Religious Fest

CHICAGO (AP)—Easter this year, March 26, is the earliest observance of the spring religious feast since 1951, when it fell on March 25.

It will be this early only twice again in this century, in 1978 and 1989. The earliest Easter in the 20th century occurred in 1940, when it fell on March 24. It will be a day earlier in the year 2008 — March 23.

Unlike Christmas, always Dec. 25, this religious holiday can range over a period of 35 days, from March 22 to April 25, because of the complicated method of reckoning it.

The last time Easter fell on March 22 was in 1818. The next time will be 2285. The last March 23 Easter was that of 1913. In 1962 Easter fell on April 22. It will not reach its latest possible date, April 25, until 2038.

There have been, and are, moves to assign Easter a fixed date. Should this ever be done, it would mean the end of controversies and complications as old as Christendom itself.

The Gospels note that Christ celebrated the Passover on Thursday, although the priesthood of his day observed it on Friday, the day of the Crucifixion.

Jews who embraced Christianity linked the Easter festival with the traditional Passover and believed it should be observed on the 14th of Nisan, first month of the Jewish calendar, regardless of the day of the week. Christians from among the Gentiles wanted the observance on Sunday, day of the Resurrection.

The controversy raged into the fourth century. The Christian church in the East followed the Jewish tradition, that in the West the Gentile.

In 325 A.D. the Council of Nicaea, first of the Christian ecumenical meetings, adopted the Nicene Creed, standardizing beliefs of the young faith. It also decreed that Easter be observed on the first Sunday after the full moon after the vernal equinox, the date when the sun crosses the equator into the Northern Hemisphere.

The date of the equinox was to be fixed each year in Alexandria, Egypt, ancient center of astronomical science. The full moon was tied into the formula to give pilgrims the advantage of moonlight in their travels to shrines.

But disagreement persisted. The time of the equinox varied according to longitude. When March 21 was standardized as the date of the equinox, inaccuracies of the Julian calendar and the difficulty of reconciling the lunar calendar with the solar year brought more confusion.

And friction developed in 1582 when Pope Gregory XIII promulgated the calendar we now observe. The East spurned any revision emanating from Rome. The West accepted it readily, except for Britain and Ireland, which followed the Julian calendar until 1752.

Consular Treaty Value Is Explained

WASHINGTON (AP) — The proposed U.S.-Soviet consular treaty was pictured today by a Senate backer as a step toward ending the Vietnam war.

Sen. Gale W. McGee, D-Wyo., said the pact could better relations between the two nations while driving a new wedge in the growing split between the Soviets and Communist China.

In an interview, McGee termed "a hoax" the contention by Sen. Karl E. Mundt, R-S.D., that the proposed treaty would prolong the war.

The treaty passed its first test Thursday when an amendment by Sen. Herman E. Talmadge, D-Ga., that would have eliminated immunity for criminal prosecution of consular officials, was defeated 53 to 26.

Talmadge said he couldn't understand why the Soviet Union should be given special privilege in view of its support of North Vietnam.

No other consular treaty provides full diplomatic immunity, he said.

Opponents say the clause would mean increased Soviet espionage since consular agents would be immune from prosecution for spying.

McGee, a lifelong student and former professor of international affairs, said the Soviets are supplying North Vietnam with third-rate weapons and materiel in an apparent attempt "to shut the thing off — at least slow it down."

Mundt says the treaty eventually would result in more trade with the Soviet Union and thereby help that nation furnish more military weapons to North Vietnam.

AAUW Elects New Officers At Meeting

Mrs. Paul Doering was elected president of the Sedalia Branch of American Association of University Women, at the meeting Monday, March, 6, with Mrs. James Rice hostess at the home of her parents, Senator and Mrs. John Ryan.

Other officers elected for the next biennium to serve with Mrs. Doering were: Mrs. Glen Riekhof, first vice-president; Mrs. Ned Postels, second vice president; Mrs. Wilfred Lee, secretary; Mrs. Virgil Ellis, treasurer and Mrs. John Zulauf, American Field Service chairman.

Mrs. John Hallams, St. Louis, a member of the board of directors, Missouri Division of the American Association of University Women, was the speaker of the evening.

Mrs. Hallams, as implementation chairman for the topic "The Law and the Citizen," spoke on the proposed changes in the judiciary system of the State of Missouri. She was well qualified to explain the complexities of the courts since she is a graduate of Washington University and has studied law at both Washington and St. Louis Universities.

AAUW members, she suggests, made a study of the questions which will probably be answered by balloting in 1968. Should the plan for non-political merit selection of judges be extended to all courts in Missouri or should various court divisions be allowed local option on method of obtaining judges? Should there be mandatory retirement for judges? If so, at what age? Should provisions be made for a method of removing for cause an incompetent judge?

What should be the membership of a commission to recommend candidates for judgeships when openings occur? Should the number of courts be reduced; for instance, should the entire lower court structure be abolished in favor of each county having a single district court? Should there be four instead of thre Courts of Appeal? Should there be a limit on the number and kind of cases sent to the Supreme Court?

Mrs. Hallams urged that university women make a concentrated study of the judiciary system and make known their conclusions. The state AAUW has gone on record supporting in principle the modernization of the courts as supported by the citizens committee of the Missouri Bar Association.

During the business meeting announcements were made concerning the State AAUW Convention which will be held in Kansas City April 14 and 15, at which Dr. Pauline Tompkins and Dr. Blanche Dow will be among the principal speakers.

Refreshments were served by the hostess committee consisting of Mrs. Louise McKee, Mrs. Rosemary Coxon, Miss Nell Longan, Mrs. Irma Keyes and Miss Edna Snell.

Embarrassing Ailment

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Paul Arnold, a baker, is so allergic to bread flour he's had to have special medical treatment just to be able to go to work.

He is still allergic to dust so if he goes into an unswept house he starts to wheeze.

"If the hostess doesn't know about his allergy," says Mrs. Arnold, "it's embarrassing."

The newly completed Metropolitan Opera House at Lincoln Center in New York City has the largest seating capacity of any opera house in the world. Built at a cost of $45 million, the Metropolitan Opera House seats 3,800, says The World Almanac. Mo Pac Women Hear Poems, Songs

Mrs. Nedra Zimmerschied was the guest entertainer at the meeting of the Missouri Pacific Women's Club which met Monday, March 6, at 7:30 p.m. at the Little Theatre of Smith Cotton High School.

Mrs. Zimmerschied was introduced by the program chairman, Mrs. William Anderson, and sang several numbers, which included: "Easter Bonnet," "I Believe" and "How Great Thou Art." She also gave several readings using several poems by Hazel Lang.

A clever poem, brought by Mrs. Saunders, entitled "Grandmothers" was read by Mrs. Frank Rouchka.

Mrs. William Schutt presided over the business meeting in the absence of Mrs. William Morgan, devotional chairman. Mrs. Schutt gave a reading entitled "The Starless Crown" which she stated she gave when she was graduated from the eighth grade at school.

The club voted to contribute to the Easter Seal Society.

Refreshments of sandwiches, cookies and coffee were served from a table with a lace cloth over green and using the St. Patrick's motif by Mrs. Roy Lierman and her committee.

Names Factors In Drops In Meat Costs

ST. LOUIS (AP)—An Illinois farmer who heads the St. Louis Producers Live Stock Marketing Association, John F. Rundquist, said Thursday that consumer boycotts and heavy imports are two factors in what he called recent depressed meat prices.

Rundquist, president of the organization said another factor forcing meat prices down has been the tendency of farmers to feed cattle, hogs and lambs to heavier than normal weights. He added that producers do not take advantage of their bargaining positions.

He described the recent growing season as "the winter of discontent among stockmen" and estimated that cash losses on some recently marketed cattle were $30 to $35 per head.

Short Films Have Same Backgrounds

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Three brief and almost wordless vignettes, each a boy-meets-girl story, comprised ABC's "Stage 67" program Thursday night. Each was a little gem of tenderness and understanding about the difficult growing up process.

The companion pieces simply called "Trilogy: The American Boy," are the work of writer-director Noel Black, and in each he told essentially the same story against different backgrounds. It was the first shy awareness of a young boy for a girl.

The first short film, completely without dialogue, showed barefooted young teens scooting around on their skateboards through city streets.

One youngster literally collided with a pretty little girl on a bicycle, the beginning of their relationship. The two young principals were perfect — a sober-eyed, freckle-nosed boy and a smiling girl with a mouth full of braces.

The second picked up a silent, almost sulky boy of about the same age who lived on the bank of a Louisiana river and paddled with his dog in a leaky canoe. He was afflicted with a severe attack of puppy love upon a chance encounter at the rural grocery store. The effect on him was violent — so much so that he sent off to a mail order house for a city-slicker suit.

But splendid in his new clothes, when he returned to the store, he found the jezebel flirting with a fellow with a sports car, and worse, she laughed at his clothes. So he just jumped in the river, climbed into the canoe and paddled off — already cured.

The final story was shot on the slumstreets of New York and was a sweet little story about a young and imaginative Chinese boy and a pretty dark-haired Puerto Rican girl. This last took more poetic license than the others and was not, perhaps, quite as effective as they were.

It was a sensitive, off-beat and most interesting hour.

Dean Martin's summer replacement — 12 shows starting in June — will be variety hours hosted by singer Vic Damone and supported by Carol Lawrence and Dino's singing daughter, Gail.

"Stage 67" will be replaced early in June with a series of 12 documentaries — half of them repeats.

Recommended weekend viewing:

Sunday — "The Vine," NBC, 4-5 EST, an account of the life of Christ, filmed in the Holy Land; Telephone Hour, NBC, 6:30-7:30, memoir of conductor Arturo Toscanini on the 100th anniversary of his birth.

Ordinance Governs Baby Sitters Now

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — A baby sitter who swats an unruly child or sneaks a cigarette without the parents' permission can wind up in Las Vegas City Jail for eight months and pay a $500 fine under a new ordinance passed by the City Council.

Baby sitters employed by agencies must also be 21 years or older, in general good health and may not smoke on the premises of the home unless parents give permission.

Naitve-Language Teaching Approved

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A bill to permit California schools to teach Mexican-American or other minority group children in their native languages has been approved unanimously by State Senate.

The bill now goes to the Assembly.

THAT SPRINGY FEELING came to perky Susan Kay Humes at the Chicago plant where this huge spiral was manufactured. An alloy steel bar measuring nearly three and a half inches in diameter, the spring weighs 1,385 pounds, and will be used as one of several such shock absorbers on a large pier for oil tankers in South Portland, Maine.

Eddy Part Of Great Era

By GENE HANDSAKER

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "A lot of people say, 'Why didn't you marry Jeanette MacDonald?' " Nelson Eddy remarked in his last interview.

"I did," he added, "eight times."

That was in eight 1935-42 movies that filled the screen with glorious song and made the handsome baritone and the regal soprano an international sensation.

The films were "Naughty Marietta," "Rose Marie," "Maytime," "Girl of the Golden West," "Sweethearts," "Bittersweet," "New Moon" and "I Married an Angel."

They were sugary spectacles in which apple blossoms fell and true love always triumphed. Eddy himself — in the interview, at his West Los Angeles home 10 days before he suffered a fatal stroke while singing in a Miami Beach night club — called them "Valentine-ish."

But stunning MacDonald-Eddy duets on such melodies as "Ah, Sweet Mystery of Life," "I'm Falling in Love with Someone" and "Indian Love Call" established a memorable era in movie annals.

"We didn't like the way each other sang, actually," Eddy said in the interview. But rumors of a feud were a "silly" publicity plant, he said.

He spoke disparagingly of his acting: "I had a director who was kind enough to say, 'Just do it naturally.' My job was singing, acting was secondary. Go ahead and criticize my acting, anybody."

Eddy had been a Philadelphia newspaper reporter and advertising copywriter before becoming an opera and concert singer. Miss MacDonald had been a successful dancer who reached singing stardom when sound came in.

Stardom brought Eddy 6,000 fan letters a week and hiked his concert fee to as high as $15,000 in places where it had been $250 two years before. His recording contract, he said in the interview, was "fabulous." He got $6,000 for singing four songs on his weekly radio show.

In 40 years he earned more than $2 million, most of it going for taxes. At death he was 65.

Miss MacDonald, who in later years specialized in stage operettas, died at 57 on Jan. 14, 1965, while awaiting heart surgery in a Houston, Tex., hospital.

In real life she had been married for 27 years to actor Gene Raymond. Eddy's wife of 28 years was the former Ann Denitz Franklin.

Eddy got the news of Miss MacDonald's death at Anaheim, a Los Angeles suburb, where he and his night-club singing partner, Miss Gale Sherwood, were to open the next night.

"The networks were there, and I was crying," he recalled. "Gale and I were to sing three or four duets associated with Miss MacDonald and me. I canceled the show, then decided that was wrong.

"We sang them all, not with great buoyancy, but we got a great hand."

The talent, a coin of Biblical times, was worth about $6,000 in terms of present day money.

Woman Caught In Wind-Driven Fire

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — A 67-year-old woman was caught in a wind-driven grass fire Thursday and suffered burns over most of her body. Her clothes were burned off.

Mrs. Dan F. Herron was in critical condition today in the Independence hospital.

Mrs. Herron was found near their home on Duncan road near Grain Valley by her husband, who had been fighting the fire with a tractor and plow for about two hours.

The first ambulance called by neighbors became lost and another was requested. Both arrived about the same time.

Clear Way For Land Sale For Library

BOSTON (AP) — Directors of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority have cleared the way to sell Authority land in Cambridge as the site for the John F. Kennedy Library.

They authorized release of a 10-acre tract as soon as the state appropriates $6 million to pay the Authority for it. The land will then be turned over to the federal government as a gift from the people of Massachusetts in memory of the late president.

India's government recognizes only 15 of the 179 languages spoken by its citizens.

WHAT IN THE WORLD!

By ALLEN GARVIN

Actor—and Painter Actor Anthony Quinn has found an outlet: he paints when not performing. Critics say his work is quite good—and even the collectors are coming around. Insiders reveal that he doesn't sign any of his oils and sketches with his own name but uses his mother's name, Manuela Oaxaca.

Unappreciated Pioneer Mrs. Robert Goddard, widow of the space pioneer who conducted, unheralded and unnoticed, some of the first rocket experiments in the 1920s and 1930s, recalls that her husband had a sense of humor despite indifference to his works. "Before he went to New Mexico," she recalls, "Bob had been conducting experiments at a place called Hell Pond near Fort Devens, Mass. In New Mexico, our launch site was located in Eden Valley. Whenever things looked bad, he would tell me we had moved Hell to Eden—so the future had to be rosy."

Life Becomes Art Where does Victor Borge get the ideas for his crazy antics? He says, "About 80 percent of my high jinks at a piano is satire on things that actually happened to artists in concert halls. I've seen some funny things myself—a fly speck on the music score mistaken for a note, even the center sheet of a piece of music stuck in upside down and played that way."

Cowboy Kick The British are on a cowboy kick. More than a dozen dude ranches have sprung up, each serving beef and sourdough instead of tea and crumpets. Former Mod boutiques are now selling saddles, lassos, chaps, and 10-gallon hats. Quick-draw clubs meet, some using electronics to measure the speed of a draw to hundredths of a second.

Weak-Kneed Manager Dave Bristol of the Cincinnati Reds doesn't like blood. Last season he took a lot of kidding from his players when he passed out after a blood test conducted during a routine physical checkup. "I didn't watch," confessed Bristol, "but just thinking about it was enough. On another occasion one of my players was telling me about a gruesome murder he had read about. The conversation took place in front of a Tampa hotel. Next thing I knew, I was lying on a couch in the hotel lobby, and someone was waving smelling salts in front of me."

color coding your home for safety, too, by painting the top and bottom steps a bright color so climbers will know when they've finished. Also, coat light switches and doorknobs in cellars, attics, stairwells, and dark hallways with reflective paint. In addition, you may want to paint fire extinguishers bright red and first-aid kits bright green.

Tut's Curse When the Egyptian government recently agreed to ship some treasures from King Tutankhamen's tomb to a Paris exhibition, old tales of the curse were revived. According to legend, anyone disturbing the tomb faces death or grave misfortune. After the Egyptians had agreed to send the relics, the daughter of the head of Egypt's museum system was critically injured in an auto accident. Then he was run over himself. He died two days later of a fractured skull.

In There Pitching At the top of the Hollywood musical heap is Henry Mancini, who has done more than 22 albums, many of which sell at the rate of about 1,000,000 a year. "I've been writing movie music since 1952," Mancini reveals, "and I even love the problems. If it happens to be a weak picture, then my job becomes doubly important—like a pitcher on a team that isn't hitting."

Phony Trips While the Pentagon isn't making a public fuss about it, the brass is fuming because many celebrities are planting phony stories about "plans" to go to Vietnam to entertain the troops. As this was written, a colonel said, "This may surprise you, but on our board there is only one name right now—Bing Crosby. He wants to go, taking only a guitar player with him."

Dog Expert "Dogs are proud. Let them know when they please you," suggests Loral I. Armstrong, a freckle-faced girl from Anoka, Minn., who probably is the leading woman trainer of hunting dogs. "The tone of your voice or a pat will do it. When the dog comes through for you, give him the reward he deserves," she suggests. She knows her business. Loral has trained a family of wolves and has been exhibiting hunting dogs in sportsmen's shows since she was six.

SCOUT DOGS—

They Ferret Out the Hidden Viet Cong

Their sense of smell and hearing has saved many GIs from ambush; in fact, their effectiveness has made them the enemy's No. 1 sniper target

By ROBERT J. ELLISON

SP4/C JERRY L. BROWN of McComb, Miss., and his scout dog Tiger led a platoon of the First U.S. Cavalry into Viet Cong territory about 250 miles north of Saigon.

They were on a search and destroy mission, but not a single enemy had been spotted. Suddenly, Tiger, a German shepherd, pulled up short and froze. It was the signal that he had scented a strange human odor. Brown whirled and pushed two nearby soldiers to the earth just as automatic weapons fired on the platoon from 75 yards away.

Brown himself hit the dirt—then saw that Tiger was wounded. He ran to the dog and discovered that Tiger had been shot seven times. Brown began to pull the dog out of the line of fire, but a slug smashed his hip, and he fell backward.

Soon helicopters, fighter-bombers, and artillery had wiped out the Viet Cong position. A captured enemy said 300 Viet Cong had been hiding in the area, ready to ambush the 200 Americans in the operation. Tiger had exposed the ambush—and died doing it.

Tiger was one of the "eyes and ears of the First Cavalry," who since arriving in Vietnam last June have compiled such an impressive record of saving American lives and ferreting out lurking Viet Cong guerrillas that they have become the No. 1 target for VC snipers. Eight Army and two Marine scout-dog platoons are active in Vietnam, and their duties are gradually expanding.

The scout dog differs from the sentry dog, who has been guarding American military installations throughout the Vietnam build-up, in that he is not trained specifically to attack. Instead, his job is more sophisticated: with his keen sense of smell (he can pick up faint human scents at 100 to 300 yards) and hearing (about 20 times better than a human's), he is able to alert his master to the unseen. When he does, he will not bark or move except on command. On night maneuvers, he acts virtually as a seeing-eye dog for his handler and the company or platoon following them.

Scout dogs are particularly valuable to "tunnel rats," the GIs who with pistol and flashlight probe the labyrinth of Viet Cong underground installations. With one sniff, scout dogs can determine whether VC are hiding in the tunnels or have been present in recent days.

German shepherds, mostly males about two years old and usually donated by their owners, are favored for military service because, unlike other guard dogs such as the Doberman pinscher, they adjust to any climate, Arctic or jungle. They reportedly have the intelligence of seven-year-old human beings, can learn 100 commands, and have a bite of 70 pounds per square inch.

Dog and handler are trained as a team at Fort Benning, Ga., for six months. They are inseparable. (The VC also use dogs but evidently have not had success developing all-important teamwork.) For example, Troubles was the scout dog of Sp4/c William Richardson of Delray Beach, Fla., who was wounded near An Khe and evacuated by helicopter.

Troubles became so agitated over losing his master that no other handler could restrain him, and he chased the departing helicopter until he vanished in the jungle.

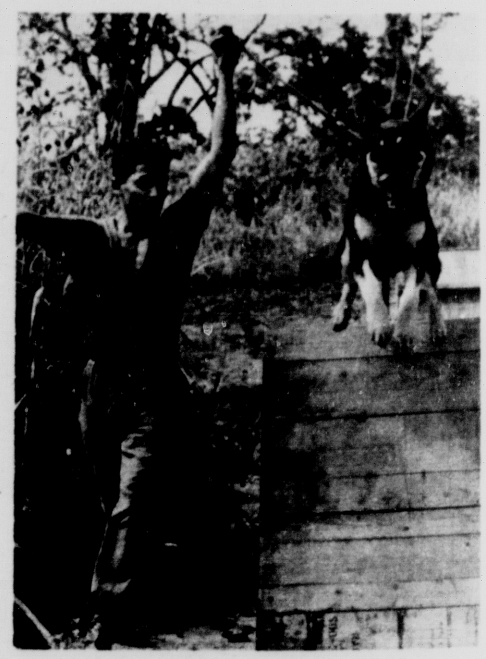
Richardson's company was airlifted out of the area later, and nobody expected to see Troubles again. But 19 days afterward, minus leash, harness, and 45 pounds, Troubles straggled into An Khe, headed right for Richardson's bunk, and lay down there. It was days before the starving dog could be coaxed out, even to eat.

It's expected that, when possible, many dogs will be "untrained" after military service and returned to their owners. Some handlers, though, hope they and their dogs will receive honorable discharges together and go home as a pair.

"That's what I planned with Sarge," says handler Pfc Gerald F. Corrigan, "but we were on a night patrol when firing broke out. Sarge loved action and tried to get to the front, and they got him. One minute I was trying to hold him back, the next he was bleeding to death. They buried him at the animal cemetery at Phan Rang. The next dog I get, I'll be tougher on—he'll freeze. I'll make sure. Maybe I can take him home."

So Phan Rang joins other animal cemeteries throughout the world for military dogs who died serving the United States. One, for example, is on Guam, where 21 German shepherds of the World War II K-9 Corps are buried, their headstones and graves still maintained by U.S. personnel. The dogs helped ferret out Japanese in tunnel warfare similar to that in Vietnam today.

Handlers like Corrigan, Richardson, and Brown don't relish the knowledge that the VC single out them and their dogs for the first burst of ambush fire. But Brown, who won the Bronze Star, points out, "It proves our dogs get the VC where it's most important—where they hide." ◆



Ybanez and Pal run over exercise-training course as daily routine.

Sgt. Manuel Ybanez of the 25th Scout Dog Platoon tests his dog Pal in a tunnel-probing maneuver near An Khe, Vietnam.

Scout dogs are friendly with strangers (above), except if handler is threatened. Rex (left) is a "retired" vet who has donated blood three times to save lives of wounded dogs.

The "buddy system"—a 25th Division GI keeps his German shepherd dry while fording a stream in Vietnam.

The Three Lives of 'James Bond'

Sean Connery swears that indestructible agent 007 has interfered with his life for the last time—maybe!

By PEER J. OPPENHEIMER

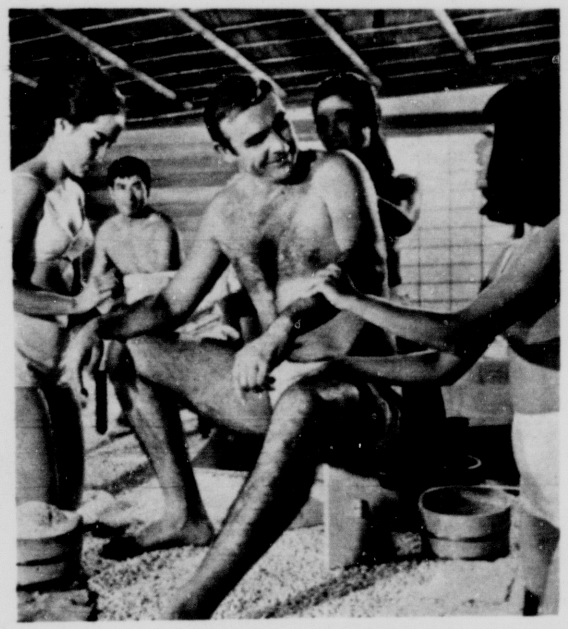
SEAN CONNERY is not fond of the press. Today, except for a few reporters with whom he feels comfortable, Sean is either unavailable, brusque, or given to cursory five-minute interviews between "takes."

He is terrified of the press because they interfere so much with his private life. He says, "The more my private life gets into the papers, the more burglaries there are and the more my family is molested." Twice recently his home in England has been burglarized; and in Japan, where he recently finished his newest James Bond movie, "You Only Live Twice," a special security detail kept near him wherever he went.

Fortunately, when Sean and I first met through a mutual friend, we happened to hit it off well. During the five or six times we have gotten together since, he has always seemed relaxed and willing to talk. Nevertheless, I didn't really get to know the man until I saw him for the first time at home in England.

In Hollywood, he had described his English home as a former convent, a four-story structure that used to accommodate 25 nuns. I had visualized a picturesque building in the lovely green English countryside.

What I found when I visited Sean at home was a drab, four-story building in a lower-middle-class district near dry-cleaning shops, pubs, gasoline stations, and factories. Although it is on a dead-end street, 100 feet away is a main thoroughfare where trucks and buses rumble past 24 hours a day. It has a tiny front yard, but in the rear there is a good-sized garden surrounded by a high fence to provide some semblance of privacy.



In "You Only Live Twice," Connery runs into all sorts of trouble—but he gets along well with the pretty Japanese girls.

There is no wall-to-wall carpeting in the living room, just a few throw rugs. The furniture is simple and inexpensive. The Connerys have a middle-aged houseman who helps with the yard and a woman to take care of the cooking. Sean's wife, actress Diane Cilento, looks after their children: a teen-aged daughter, Jean, from Diane's previous marriage, and their son, Jason, 4.

It is not unusual when one phones the Connerys to have Diane yell into the instrument, "Call back later, I've got the kid in the bath!" and slam down the receiver.

Sean will probably earn $3 million from his latest Bond film. He made about half that much last year. Yet the only reason he is looking for another place to live is lack of privacy. "People constantly crawl over the fence trying to get into the house," he says.

He doesn't mind the environment. On the contrary, he feels more at home there than on the fashionable estate he rented in North Hollywood last year. One of his coworkers told me, "The same holds true at the studio.

Sean is more at ease with the technicians than with the executives, who pester him constantly."

Making an impression has never been important to him. On his first trip to Hollywood in 1964, he arrived with one suit. When he sent it to the cleaners, he borrowed one from a friend rather than invest in another suit. On the other hand, since he found it too bothersome to carry his golf clubs to Hollywood, one morning he plunked down $2,000 and told the pro to get him all the necessary equipment for the day's game.

Sean's life can be divided into three categories. There's his interest in sports—golf, soccer, football, and, lately, karate. ("It's the physical discipline, not just the exercise that intrigues me.")

Then there is his career. Financially he has become the most successful actor of all time. His five Bond films are likely to gross more than $150 million. No other performer can point at such a report.

But he has yet to pick a property himself that has been a success at the box office. He is always searching for a showcase opposed to his indestructible James Bond image—while the public insists on identifying him with the superhero he has created on the screen. As a result, his non-Bond films, while winning critical acclaim, have been box-office disappointments.

Finally, he has his wife and children. Although their marriage was in difficulty a couple of years ago, Sean and Diane have worked out their problems and seem assured of a fairly smooth relationship in the future.

"Of the three categories," an intimate of Connery insists, "number three is the least important to Sean. He never stays home long enough to be a family man. His impatience to go to work shows through."

While Sean's tastes are simple, he is by no means a simple man. It would be a mistake to infer that his lack of communication means he has no desire to learn. Connery's formal education stopped when he was 15, but he never stopped educating himself.

The last couple of times I saw Connery, he was bitter about everyone connected with the Bond films, particularly the producers, Albert Broccoli and Harry Saltzman. Here, too, he has eased up somewhat. Much of the credit for this goes to Lewis Gilbert, director of "You Only Live Twice," who has given the Bond characterization a wider emotional range.

Another reason for Sean's contentedness is that this is his last Bond picture. He agreed to do it only after the producers released him from his sixth, and final, commitment. He was also given a "stop date," by which time the film had to be finished. "Before, I'd be told I would work 16 weeks and then they kept me 24 weeks," he told me. "That's for the birds!"

If it is his last Bond movie, the rushes indicate that it may be the best one. It deals with 007's efforts to stop SPECTRE from starting a third world war and ends with a hair-raising sequence as Bond dismantles a rocket in a Japanese volcano.

But whether Sean can quit being Bond is questionable. The producers insist they can find another Bond among the legions of actors who would jump at a chance to play 007. But others in the industry claim no one will ever take Connery's place.

Sean told me, "I have no plans for the future. All I know is that as soon as I am finished with this picture, I want to direct my play, 'The Secret of the World,' with Shelley Winters. From now on I will not commit myself to more than one project at a time."

I would give odds there will be at least one more Bond film if the present one does as well as expected—because Sean can get almost any terms he wants and because the decision to accept the offer or not will be entirely his.

That means a lot to the handsome stubborn Scot. ◆

AN IRISH TEA

MELANIE DE PROFT Food Editor

This American version of Irish soda bread complements the brisk, full flavor of freshly brewed tea.

■ Bring a bit of the Irish charm to your tea table with freshly baked breads so likely to appear at teatime in Ireland. Let the delicious aromas drift from the kitchen to perfume the air as guests arrive.

Food for the afternoon tea, whether for four, served informally in the living room, or for 40, served more formally in the dining room, might include one or more of these: lavishly buttered slices of homemade brown and white Irish soda bread with little pots of jam; a basket filled with hot crusty scones; squares of warm currant gingerbread; sponge cake filled with a thin ribbon of jelly or jam and topped with a sprinkling of snowy white confectioners' sugar; small flat squares of unadorned butter cake; cookies; or for something special—berries and whipped cream.

With tea table in readiness and shamrocks for décor, greet your friends with that wonderful, warm hospitality of the Irish.

Hot Tea

Heat teapot thoroughly by filling with boiling water. Pour off water; put into pot 1 rounded teaspoon loose black tea or 1 tea bag for each cup of tea to be brewed, or use 1 large tea bag for about 4 cups tea. For each cup of tea, pour 1 cup of briskly boiling freshly drawn water into the teapot. Cover pot and allow tea to steep 3 to 5 min. Stir the brew and strain the tea into each teacup as it is poured or remove tea bag or bags before pouring.

Irish Soda Bread, American Style

- 3 cups sifted regular all-purpose flour
- ⅓ cup sugar
- 2½ teaspoons baking soda
- 1½ teaspoons salt
- 2 tablespoons butter or margarine
- 1¾ cups uncooked old-fashioned rolled oats
- ½ cup chopped candied green cherries
- 1 egg, beaten
- 1¾ cups buttermilk

1. Blend flour, sugar, baking soda, and salt in a bowl. Cut in butter or margarine until blended. Mix in oats and cherries. Gradually add a mixture of the egg and buttermilk, stirring until well blended.

2. Turn batter into a greased 9-in. round layer cake pan; spread evenly. Cut a deep cross into top. Garnish with green cherries.

3. Bake at 375°F. 45 to 50 min.

One loaf soda bread

Note: For Brown Irish Soda Bread recipe, see FAMILY WEEKLY, March 13, 1966.

Irish Scones

- 1¾ cups sifted regular all-purpose flour
- 1½ teaspoons baking powder
- ½ teaspoon baking soda
- 1 tablespoon sugar
- ½ teaspoon salt
- ½ cup shortening
- ½ cup buttermilk

1. Blend the flour, baking powder, baking soda, sugar, and salt in a bowl. Cut in shortening with a pastry blender until particles are the size of rice kernels.

2. Add the buttermilk all at one time. Stir with a fork until dough follows fork and forms a ball.

3. Turn onto a floured surface and knead lightly with fingertips about 8 times. Divide dough in half and shape each into a round about ½ in. thick. Cut each round into 6 wedge-shaped pieces. Place on an ungreased baking sheet.

4. Bake at 450°F. 8 to 10 min. Serve while still warm. 1 doz. scones

Teatime Cake Squares

- 2 cups sifted regular all-purpose flour
- ½ teaspoon ground mace
- Few grains salt
- 1 cup butter or margarine
- 1 cup plus 10 tablespoons sugar
- 5 eggs (1¼ cups)

1. Blend the flour, mace, and salt; set aside.

2. Cream the butter or margarine; gradually add the sugar, beating well. Add the eggs, one at a time, beating thoroughly after the addition of each egg.

3. Add the dry ingredients in thirds, mixing until blended after each addition. Turn into a greased 15½x10½x1-in. jelly-roll pan; spread the batter evenly.

4. Bake at 350°F. 25 to 30 min., or until top springs back when lightly touched with fingertip.

5. Cool cake in pan on cooling rack. Cut into squares.

I'm a Cop Who Saves Cops

By JOSEPH THURSTON as told to Lillian Pompian
Consultant, Chicago Board of Health

WHEN I SLIPPED into alcoholism some years ago, those who knew me in the Chicago Police Department wanted to help.

One of my superiors said, "Joe, you were never afraid of a fight. Why can't you fight this?"

I had no answer for him. Sure, I'd never been afraid to walk into a building and drag out a killer, but now I stumbled down the street scared to death, not knowing where I'd been the night before or what I'd done. I had run the gamut of transfers to lesser posts, suspensions, hospitalizations, despair, and degradation.

But with the help of God and Alcoholics Anonymous, I fought through my battle. On my first anniversary of being in the AA program, my son Jerry, 17, sent me this telegram: "In just 365 days you have proved, through the help of God, that the faults of yesterday could be forgotten through the virtues of today. I am doubly proud to say that I am a Thurston . . ."

Soon afterward, Police Commissioner Timothy J. O'Connor called me to his office. "We have a new job for you," he said. "We want you to be liaison officer and rehabilitation counselor for the Department."

The Commissioner explained that alcoholism had become an acute problem on the police force. The disease strikes policemen in the same proportion as men in any other field, but a cop is particularly susceptible to it because of the nature of his work. Friendly bartenders are always ready to pour him a convivial drink. Homeowners often offer him drinks, and it's hard not to accept.

The city had decided that nothing less than a full-time program would meet the problem. Because of my experience in AA, I was to head up a special division to fight alcoholism within the Department. I agreed but only under one condition: "I will not give the names or the badge numbers of men who join the program."

"It's a deal," said the Commissioner. Thus, in July, 1954, the unique Fellowship Club of Chicago was born.

But though I had accepted the job, I was worried. Could I handle it? Would the pressures become too great for me, and if that happened, would I start drinking again? I could only pray this wouldn't happen. I started my task.

Working with city officials, I was able to get office space in a building some distance from police headquarters. This would protect the identity of men seeking help.

The next step was to call a meeting of top-echelon police deputies. They would have to recognize men in their departments who had the problem, find a tactful way to explain the program, and offer to help without any coercion.

"I can't find God," the alcoholic cop said. "That's strange," I said, "He isn't lost."

I stressed that membership in the Fellowship Club was not to be compulsory. There would be no dues or fees; the program was to be supported by the Department. All a man needed, actually, was an honest desire to quit drinking before it was too late.

Immediately men began to come in. Getting a fellow to admit he's alcoholic is usually the problem. Over coffee, a typical visitor would say, "I don't need this program. I hear it's for drunks."

"This program is not for drunks but for people who don't want to be drunks," I would answer.

If we are convinced a man wants help, we go all the way for him. This includes time off without penalty, medical and psychiatric aid, full pay while he is in the hospital, help for his family, and early return to duty.

After he gets out of the hospital, he is given advice and companionship, and his problem is explained to his family. He is made to feel that sobriety is not only an exhilarating experience but a rewarding one—rewarding without a hangover.

Consider one of our early cases: Frank, a patrolman who stumbled into the office one cold winter day. He confessed he'd been a periodic drinker for years, using alcohol as an escape from problems. He had a deep sense of guilt and doubted he could ever make up for the pain he had caused his family.

I said, "If you want to get off the stuff, you can, but you must forget the past. Yesterday is history, tomorrow's a mystery. Follow the AA philosophy of quitting 'one day at a time' and seeking divine guidance."

He said, "I can't find God."

"That's strange, I said, "He isn't lost."

I recommended immediate hospitalization. At first, he refused, but I insisted, promising to put him on the medical roll so his pay would continue and his family would have some means of support. Frank was a lot sicker than he thought. Two days after he entered the hospital, he went into an alcoholic convulsion. Every day I went to see him.

"Pray for me," he said.

"Pray for yourself," I answered. "God likes to talk to strangers."

He pulled through. When he was discharged, I had him work out of our office for a week. Every day he was sent out to help others—men who were dead-drunk on the floor of some saloon or who were holed up in a crummy hotel room seeing elephants and rats on the walls. Frank soon found out that by helping someone else you can help yourself.

Today he has more responsibilities than ever before in his life. He works full time for the Fellowship Club, is the father of six, and owns his own home. And he has learned to pray. Every morning he asks for strength for the next 24 hours, and every evening he gives thanks for the help he has received.

So widely recognized has our program become that representatives of police departments across the land and abroad have come to study our methods, and hundreds of requests for information have come from all over the world.

Sometimes the club is too successful. One member told me recently, "When I came to you, I owed $450. Now I owe $15,000. Since I'm sober, my credit rating has gone up!"

I laughed. I didn't tell him I was paying off a debt, too—a debt I owed God for all the days and months I had wasted. It feels good to pay off this debt.

I was particularly pleased when Mayor Richard J. Daley expanded the scope of my work by making me consultant to the Chicago Board of Health. This allows me to serve all city and county employees as well as any citizen of Chicago who desires help, information, or guidance.

But to a lot of people I'm still "the cop who saves cops." I don't mind. A policeman fighting alcoholism has a special meaning for me. ◆

Joe arrives home—safe, sober, and happy.

Trippingly on the Toe

THE SCARLET "A" on my bosom stands (if you'll kindly pardon the poor choice of verbs) for Accident Prone.

Prone is what I usually am.

Recently, while preparing dinner for a few guests, I opened the refrigerator and encountered a jar of jam, which bounced off my toe. My guests were all nicely shod. I wore bedroom slippers.

A short time later, I wore them again. While crossing a street, I turned my ankle and collapsed in a clutch on the crosswalk. A startled policeman stopped his squad car and directed the traffic around me. Then he hurried over and tried to heave me to my bleeding feet.

"Goodness gracious," he said (or words to that effect), "are you all right?"

"I don't know," I whispered. We stood there like interlocking pretzels for a time. Finally he said, "Well, get in the squad car. I'll take you home."

"I don't live in this town," I said.

"Oh," he said.

We drove around for a while. He peered furtively at my feet.

"My," he said, "you've certainly torn your stockings. And look at the blood on your foot. I really don't understand how you could fall down and skin the top of your foot."

"I don't know, either," I whined, "but I do that a lot."

"And look at the terrible bruise on your shin!" he exclaimed.

"Oh, that old thing? That's the scar from two years ago when I fell down. I had 17 stitches that time."

The policeman drove faster. He looked more nervous than before. "What shall I do?" he inquired helplessly.

"Take me to my car," I said. "I think I can drive now."

We made the trip at top legal speed. He dumped me in and drove off before I could change my mind.

I think I can understand why he was so eager. What policeman wants to be seen around town with a fallen woman?

NORTH-SOUTH-EAST-WEST— HOME GARDENERS WRITE:

Received plants on May 18. They are already growing beautifully 9 days later. S.C.J. Dudley, Mass.

It's unbelievable but my neighbors can verify it. We are having strawberries now in Feb. F.M.S. Los Angeles, Calif.

So pleased I had to write. Had berries all summer long to frost. Big, juicy, some large as plums. D.B.W. Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

Plants were simply great, 59 out of 60 lived. R.A.W. Lurton, Ark.

Planted on Apr. 17. They are now in full bloom, May 13. R.H.R. Sarasota, Fla.

Raised so many berries we glutted the market. J.B. Wabash, Ind.

Received plants. These are the best I ever bought. W.L.N. Eagle, Idaho

Plants are growing exceptionally well. I know nothing about raising strawberries. R.B.W. Cocoa Beach, Fla.

Finest plants I ever received from anyone. N.E. Springfield, Mo.

Like plants so well I'm ordering for friends and grandson. O.E.M. Birmingham, Ala.

Simple pictured instructions included free plus 3 mo. written guarantee certificate. We have served our customers faithfully for almost 20 years. We are considered one of the largest suppliers of strawberry plants in the U.S.

GROW ALL YOU CAN EAT FOR PENNIES PER BASKET

For the average family we recommend 20 vines planted on 9 ft. square plot. Pick a sunny spot, spend a few moments to plant. Little special care of cultivation is needed. Strawberry plants multiply rapidly reaching full maturity in 2 years. Each Mother plant bears many Daughter plants. If allowed to take root, these will become Mother plants producing additional Daughter plants. By following the simple illlustrated instructions in our free booklet, you can soon enlarge your harvest to take care of all your needs for short cake, breakfast, freezing, and a year round supply of jam. This plot of beautiful, ornamental and prolific everbearers will grow baskets and baskets, literally hundreds of large, luscious berries over a full 5 month period. Readily trained they will grow up-up-up walls, fences, trellis or poles. Within a matter of days you see them come to life. In a short time you'll be picking clusters of ripe, mouth-watering sun sweetened berries, some as large as plums, clean, right off the vine, with no dirt. We have guaranteed these same results to hundreds of thousands of other amateur gardeners like yourself who have purchased millions of these remarkable plants. We are specially proud of the thousands of orders received thru recommendations to friends and neighbors.

 FORMERLY — 7 FOR $2.98*

In past years we were able to supply over 70 leading department stores. These stores advertised our everbearers at 7 plants for $2.98 retail. Now you can order directly from us and receive 20 plants for only $2.00. Year after year the demand has always exceeded our limited supply. Don't delay — order now.

Plants will be shipped in time for planting in your locality.

POLLY'S POINTERS
by Polly Cramer

DEAR POLLY—For 13 years I have been using a close-tipped bobby pin to lace my braided rugs instead of a needle. I use the kind with a plastic end and find the work is both easier and faster. —MARILYN

(Share your homemaking ideas. Send them to POLLY, care of this newspaper.)

DEAR POLLY---When my father dines in a restaurant that has unusual place mats, he makes a practice of asking for an extra one which they are usually willing if not eager, to supply. He uses the backs of these place mats as stationery. Besides telling us where he has been eating, we often obtain a lot of interesting information about the place.---JOHN

DEAR POLLY—Please tell Mrs. C. D. that the best way I have found to clean the top of the barbecue stand or griddle is to place it in the dew and leave it there overnight. Wash the next morning while still damp.—FRANCES

DEAR GIRLS---Betty, my assistant, and I were both delighted to let the dew do it and it really did. I spread an opened newspaper over the top of mine after placing it on the grass where the dew could soak it. This kept the early morning sun off the rack until it could be brought inside for what was an easy washing.---POLLY
